OUR LITTLE DAUGHTER.

FRANCES JOSEPHINE CARDEN, BORN AT MONTREAL, C. E., JULY 9, 1867.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

Ring out, glad bells, and mark the day!
Ring joyful o'er the water!
Ring the glad tidings far away!
Ring out, for to my heart you say,
This day has brought my daughter.

'Tis but a dream—this little sprite
Is surely not a mortal;
An angel, wearied with long flight,
With folded wings, this blessed night,
Has come within the portal.

Or is it but a fairy prize?
And Lepricorn has brought her?
Look in those dark and lustrous eyes,
Wherein a world of wonder lies,
And say, it is my daughter.

Ring out the tidings far and near,
And sound it o'er the water,
A lonely man is living there,
Whisper it gently in his ear:
"This sprite is your grand-daughter."

Titles and wealth, a stately hall,
Are his beyond the water,
But wealth, and land, and titles all,
We envy not—what e'er befall
We have our little daughter. JAMES CARDEN.

CHAPTER XXIV.

THE GAMBLER.

The game progressed slowly. Edward Leslie did not evince any impatience or agitation. Not so Glendour; he was terribly agitated. At last he uttered a howl of despair. He had lost the game. The estate in a ring-fence in Hampshire was Edward Leslie's property.

"Deal the cards!" he cried with feverish eagerness. "I'll try again."

"Not to-night," exclaimed Leslie, rising and throwing down the cards.

"You refuse?"

"Decidedly; you are not in a fit state to play any more to-night—besides, the luck is against you."

"I may rely on your courtesy to give me my revenge?" asked Glendour.

"Whenever you like."

"Thank you; that is all I want. You are right not to let me play any more to-night," he continued, passing his hand over his fevered brow.

As is usually the case when the hinge upon which domestic happiness revolves gets rusty, the Marquis Glendour sought recreation out of doors and away from his wife. It never occurred to Lady Mirabel Bucanan that Isabel could be unhappy with so rich, young and handsome a man as Glendour. She fancied that the possession of a title and money would make her the happiest creature in existence. But it was not so. Although a second time a mother, she infinitely preferred Harold—the child of her first love and her first husband. When visiting him at his tutor's, or when he was staying with her for a day or two at her hotel, her eyes brightened, and some of the old joyous expression seemed to come back to her face. Glendour's manner to her was very much changed, but she did not notice it, such was her abstraction. Sometimes he would be out nearly all night; and when he did return he would be visibly intoxicated. His passion for play was now so great that nothing could restrain him. He was deaf to the voice of prudence. Although poverty stared him in the face, he was led on by an unsubstantial will-o'-the-wisp to his ruin.

Edward Leslie won a considerable sum from him at the commencement of his folly, but all he wished to do was to implant a strong desire for play in his breast. Having done that, he could well afford to leave him to others. Great as was the wealth of the marquis, it gradually dwindled away. His temper became soured, and his manner to his wife more distant than before. Reports of his reckless behaviour reached Lady Bucanan, who promptly sought her daughter to inquire into the truth of the rumors.

She found Isabel arranging a box of German toys, which she was going to take to Grove House for Harold that very afternoon.

"Why, Isa, my dear, how pre-occupied you seem! I declare you did not hear me enter the room!" exclaimed her mother.

"I was busy," replied Isabel, advancing with extended hand.

"Is not your little child almost too young for such toys as these?" inquired the countess, critically examining the box.

"They are not for Colin; I intended them for Harold," answered Isabel, a little confused.

"Dear me! what infatuation!" answered her mother. "I really did hope that you had forgotten all about that beggar's brat by this time."

"Hush!" cried Isabel, "you must not call my angel bad names. Let it be sufficient for you that you have destroyed my happiness. Let it be enough for you that you came to me with lying certificates of death."

"Of whose death?"

"Of my husband's."

"What mean you, Isa?" inquired the Countess Bucanan, looking perplexedly at her.

"Edward Leslie lives. I know it. Ask me no questions. It is certain that I have contracted a bigamous marriage with Glendour."

The countess paced the room excitedly; at length, stopping opposite Isabel, she exclaimed:

"If what you say is true—and I am quite prepared to believe it—you must receive my assurance that I was equally deceived with yourself."

Isabel shook her head incredulously.

"Obstinate girl!" cried her mother, "I am not seeking to justify myself, but this I will say, that the end I had in view would excuse any means. Providentially I have accomplished my end."

"At the expense of my peace of mind," said Isabel bitterly.

"Away with such puling, sickly sentimentality!" exclaimed the Countess Bucanan. "Look your position boldly in the face, and, such as it is, accept it."

"I shall never be a woman of the world, in your sense of the word," said Isabel, sadly.

"Let that pass," continued the countess. "I did not come here to rate you upon your shortcomings, but to interrogate you respecting your husband."

"I am afraid," said Isabel, reseating herself and once more arranging the toys, "that I shall be unable to gratify your curiosity."

"But surely if any one can give me information it is yourself. I have heard that he is devoted to the gaming table. Rumors reach me to the effect that his magnificent patrimony is dwindling away to dwarfish proportions. Is it so? Do you experience any want of money?"

"No, I cannot say that I do," replied Isabel; "but my wants are really so very small that I seldom trouble him for a check for a large amount."

"Is he much away from home?"

"I may say always. Sometimes I can conscientiously declare I don't see him once in four and twenty hours."

"Is it possible?" said the countess, in a tone of indignation; "and whose fault do you suppose that is? Here is a man with a young and lovely wife—what does he do? Absents himself systematically from his home. What is the cause? who is the cause? Why, you are, to be sure. I have no patience with such a girl. Tell me, now, and speak the truth. Do you ever try to please him?"

"Never," replied Isabel.

"What can you expect in that case but indifference and neglect? What else do you deserve?"

"I always told him I could not love him."

"Is it your duty to love him? Instead of sitting here arranging those toys for Edward Leslie's child, you should be awaiting your husband's return with his child in your arms, and let him see a welcome to his father."

"I cannot be a hypocrite."

"Ah, well, I can see how it will all end. Glendour is driven by you to the solace of a gambling table. He will be ruined in time, and you will be reduced to beggary. But mark one thing, Isabel."

"Nothing you can say will intimidate me," replied Isabel. "I am callous and broken hearted; nothing frightens me, because I care for nothing."

"That is a very desperate state to get into. But mark me: should you, through the misconduct of your husband, for which you are indirectly responsible, become a pauper, I will have nothing to do with you."

"I know that full well. Believe me, my knowledge of your character has enabled me to penetrate sufficiently deep to know that when I cease to be useful to you, or to be able to a set in the accomplishment of your projects of aggrandisement, I have nothing to expect from you," exclaimed Isabel, feelingly.

"I am glad that your powers of discernment are so good. When people mutually understand one another, it saves a vast deal of trouble, and since you know as much as you do of my disposition, I should advise you to study Glendour more than you do, or some fine morning you will awake without a son in your pocket."

"Ah, me!" sighed Isabel, "I am very miserable, but I have always one consolation."

"Your child?" inquired the countess with a sneer.

"He, poor boy, did not occupy my thoughts at that moment. I was thinking that the river always afforded a last home for the wretched."

The mother looked at her daughter earnestly to see if she really meant it. The result of her scrutiny was that she came to the conclusion that Isabel had so far profited by the lessons she had given her as to take a leaf out of her book, and simulate a despair which did not actually exist in her breast. After again recommending Isabel to pay more attention to her husband, the countess went away, saying she should return to dinner. As soon as she was gone Isabel ordered her carriage and drove to the Rev. Septimus Sandifer's, at Grove House, Lower Norwood. Here a surprise awaited her for which she was not prepared. She drove up to the door, as usual, expecting to see Harold rush up to the brougham and open the door with his little hands; but there was no demonstration of the kind on the present occasion. The people of the house seemed to delay coming to the door much longer than usual. What had happened? In great perturbation, with her heart fluttering against her breast, Isabel nervously opened the door of the brougham herself and alighted. As she did so a servant appeared,

"Where is Harold? where is my boy? Why does he not come to meet me as usual?" exclaimed Isabel.

"Step inside, ma'am. Mr. Sandifer will speak to you," answered the servant.

This vague speech, which avoided a direct reply to her own, alarmed the anxious mother terribly. With trembling limbs she made her way into the drawing room, where Mr. Sandifer was. He appeared ill at ease, and waited for her to question him.

"What am I to understand, sir, by this strange reception?" she inquired.

"Really, my dear madam, I scarcely know how to break it to you," said the Rev. Septimus Sandifer; "but—"

"Is he dead?"

"O, no! I have every hope that he will be speedily restored to us."

"What do you mean? For Heaven's sake, be explicit. Where is my boy?" cried Isabel, piteously.

"In a word, my dear lady," said Mr. Sandifer, "he went out walking yesterday."

"By himself?"

"Yes, only—"

"How imprudent! How wrong of you!"

"It was without my knowledge or sanction. He must have taken advantage of my absence. How it happened I cannot tell, but he has not been seen since. Some gipsies—"

"Gipsies, do you say?" cried Isabel. "God help him! He has been stolen."

Her overwrought nerves gave way at this revelation, and the thought of the misery her poor boy was sustaining at the hands of his vagrant captors. She sank slowly against the wall, her eyes closed, and she fell to the ground. Mr. Sandifer rang the bell for a servant and sent for his wife, who administered the first restoratives that came to hand. Isabel was restored to consciousness after a time. They placed her in an arm chair and did all they could to comfort and console her.

"The police have been communicated with," said Mrs. Sandifer, who did not address her by her title; for to those worthy people she was simple Mrs. Leslie.

"Yes," cried her husband; "and they express themselves confidently about the matter, declaring that they will have the child back again before long. Gipsies have been known to do this sort of thing many times before."

Rising, Mrs. Sandifer went to the mantlepiece and took therefrom a letter.

"I think this is for you. It is addressed to Mrs. Leslie, and came this morning," she exclaimed, handing the epistle to Isabel.

Before seeing it Isabel had been like Rachael weeping for her children and refusing to be comforted. It achieved a magical transformation. With heightened color and anxious fingers she tore open the envelope. A misty haze swam before her eyes. The lines ran into one another, but she contrived to read the contents:—

"Edward Leslie begs to inform the lady who once had the honor to bear his name, but who has since proved false as every vow, who has lost all delicacy, all feeling, and disgraced every memory of the past, that he has deemed it fitting that he should take his child under his protection, so that he may teach him to hate that mother who has so conclusively proved herself unworthy of the slightest consideration from his father. The first principle inculcated in the child's mind will be an utter abhorrence of its unnatural mother, who, as an undying legacy from Edward Leslie, has received his lasting and bitterest curse.

"Seek neither father nor child; to you they are dead forever."

"O," murmured Isabel, so, so sadly, "this is awful, this is too much! Let me die, for I cannot—cannot bear it!"

CHAPTER XXV.

THE ROAD TO RUIN.

The first blow directed by Edward Leslie against his unfortunate wife came upon her with crushing effect. To attack her through her child was to subject her to cruelest agony. As for Harold, he soon began to like his father: as a rule, boys prefer their father's society to that of their mother's. Leslie provided a home for him with some friends who were relations of Hardisty's. He did not venture to introduce him to Zerlina. He spent much of his time with the lad, and taught him, as he said he would, to hate his mother. He proved an apt pupil. His father petted him, gave him plenty of pocket money, sent him daily to a public school in London, and did all he could, as he said, to make a man of him. And so the world went on its way.

Glendour became seriously embarrassed. Up to the time of his meeting with Leslie he had been a very steady, sober gentleman; but after that unfortunate introduction he became totally altered, plunging into all sorts of excesses, and indulging in every species of fashionable dissipation. One night he was at Bartlett's with Leslie and half-a-dozen other men. The room in which they were blazed with light; tables for card-playing were placed at convenient distances from one another. High play was the order of the day at Bartlett's, as it is now at more than one fashionable London club. Edward Leslie's face wore a triumphant expression; he was determined that this night should witness the completion of Glendour's ruin. The marquis looked pale and haggard; a year and a half of dissipation will tell a tale, let the man who professes to enjoy it be as strong as Hercules.

"You look a little hipped, marquis," exclaimed Leslie.

"The least bit casual," answered Glendour, fabricating a smile.

"Have you dined?"

"I have eaten. I never dine now; my appetite seems to have left me."

"Have some Moselle. If you cannot eat you can at least drink."

The Marquis Glendour signified his assent, and the wine was ordered. He drank greedily, and the effect of his potations was soon apparent. He became very reckless, and when he saw Leslie handling a pack of cards, he challenged him to play.

"As you like," returned Leslie, carelessly.

They sat down opposite one another, and soon became the centre of a knot of spectators. The luck was with Leslie, and he won largely. Undismayed by his heavy losses, the Marquis Glendour wished to double the stakes, but Leslie refused.

"To-morrow will do as well," he said. "I do not want to take undue advantage of my luck, which is in the ascendant. There are many gentlemen standing around us; play with one of them."

Acting upon this advice, Glendour soon found an opponent ready and willing to undertake an encounter with him. There was a fatality about the cards that night. He could not win. At seven o'clock he rose from the table, wearied utterly in mind and body. A pile of gold, notes and acceptances lay before his adversary. Glendour knew that he was more than a beggar, because he would be a defaulter. He had lost everything, and he had not the wherewithal to satisfy his debts of honor. His losses had sobered him to some extent, though he was laboring under great mental and cerebral excitement when he returned to his hotel. He found Isabel asleep, but he did not scruple to awake her.

"Why should she sleep," he said, "when I can have no rest?"

"What is it?" asked Isabel, rubbing her eyes with the back of her hand, and scarcely knowing who stood before her.

"It is I, Glendour—your husband," he replied; "I stand here a ruined man."

"Ruined?"

"Yes, irretrievably. I haven't a halfpenny to call my own. At last my folly and infatuation has culminated in beggary."

"What shall you do?" asked Isabel.

"Blow my brains out. Don't start; it is as likely as not," he answered, with a reckless laugh.

Isabel did not appear horrified at this threat. There was a glimmer of hope in the distance. She seemed to see her way out of the house of bondage.

"At all events," continued her husband, "we must leave here in a short time. I have no money to pay our bills, and—"

"You can go your way," said Isabel, with a frigid air, "and I will go mine. We have an opportunity of parting amicably; let us do so."

"Why should we part?" he asked.

"When you were rich I could not love you," she replied, "and I am positive my repugnance would increase in poverty."

"I—I think I could make an effort with you, Isa," he stammered.

"You must make one without me," she said coldly; "apply to your relations; they will get you some appointment abroad; or if that fails you, try the turf—it is the paradise of poor noblemen, or else write my death in the papers and marry the widow of a rich city man. I will do nothing to spoil your prospects."

He sat down in a chair and covered his face with his hands. Isabel had a wild, insane hope that if she could in any way blot out the error she had made in marrying Glendour, Leslie would look kindly upon her again. She had espoused him thinking her first husband dead, and she fancied that Leslie must still love her, or he would not have been so anxious to steal away the child.

"I suppose you are right, Isabel," exclaimed the Marquis Glendour; "we must separate. Your mother will care for you, and that removes one weight from my mind. I have been a fool and must pay the penalty of my folly. If it is possible to snatch anything out of the fire and to recover my lost position, I will seek you out again and endeavor to behave better to you."

Isabel busied herself with packing up a few books and papers, appearing utterly indifferent to the man's evident distress.

"You will take care of our child, Isabel?" he continued.

"Yes," she answered very coldly.

"Remember he is the heir to my title and—I was going to say estates."

"The heir presumptive to the title of Glendour shall be well tended," she said.

"Let us walk out together," he added; "I have no means to pay our bill here, which must be rather heavy. To try to take our clothes and effects away is out of the question. I believe I have a couple of sovereigns; one will take you to your mother's."

"Thank you, I have enough for my wants."

Retiring to her bedroom, she stayed away about ten minutes, returning plainly dressed, wearing some jewelry and carrying her child in her arms. Glendour gave her his arm, and they left the hotel together. He imagined that she would get a cab and drive to the Countess Bucanan's. As for himself, he did not know exactly what he should do. At length, Isabel exclaimed:

"Here we are at the corner of the street; let us separate. Good bye."

"Is that all you have to say? Well, good bye. I will go into some tavern and drink to our next meeting."

Isabel shook her head sadly.

"I have no wish to meet you again," she said; and allowing him to grasp her hand without any responsive movement on her part, she pulled her veil over her face and walked quickly away.

She had a little money, and her intention was to take a lodging in a cheap but respectable locality. Difficulties, however, beset her. Landladies, as a rule, are a suspicious class, and when they saw a lady with a baby in her arms—the lady being unwilling or unable to give a reference, and calling herself a widow—some slammed the door in her face, others said they were full, and others again demanded an exorbitant rent. She walked about until she felt so tired that she could have sat down on the first doorstep and gone to sleep. Unaccustomed to carry her own child, it weighed heavily upon her strength, wearied her arms, and felt like a lump of lead. At length she reached a small street which had the merit of looking very clean. The houses were two-storied ones. Most of them had little bills staring out of the windows, informing the houseless wanderer that apartments furnished were to be had within. Isabel walked half way down the street, and knocked at a door, which was opened by a tall woman who had once been good-looking, but upon whose features time had made some ravages.

"You can see the rooms," she said, in answer to Isabel's inquiry. "But perhaps one would be enough for you. Where is your husband, and at what does he work?"

"We are separated," replied Isabel, "I shall be quite by myself."

"And that is your child?"

"Yes."

"You can give me a reference, I suppose?"

Isabel produced her purse, and handed the woman a sovereign, saying:

"That is all I can give you to satisfy your scruples. Either let me come in at once, or say you don't want me for an inmate of your house, and I will go elsewhere."

The sight of the money mollified the woman, and she led the way into the parlor, apologising for her suspicious questions. In half an hour Isabel found herself sitting before a cheerful fire, which was the more agreeable as approaching winter had brought icy cold weather with it. After ministering to her child's wants and her own, she went out to purchase a few articles of wearing apparel which she had been unable to bring with her. The insane hope that Edward Leslie would forgive her, which we have before alluded to, sustained her. The change from absolute luxury to what was almost as bad as positive penury, did not affect her much. Her child she bestowed little attention upon. The landlady had a newly married daughter who was a mother, and Isabel felt quite a relief when she offered to take charge of her baby with her own. Thinking but little of the future, Isabel would go out every day, and wander curiously up and down West End thoroughfares in the hope and expectation of seeing Edward Leslie. But she met him not. Returning home weary and footsore, she would peer listlessly into the fire, and watch the fantastic shapes visible in the glowing coals. December came with its frosts and its snows. The ground was covered with a white mantle. Isabel had spent all the money she had, and necessity had obliged her to part with the jewelry that once adorned her person. Even her dresses were sold, and she was compelled to pawn everything she had to obtain the bare necessaries of life. What a change for the once elegant Marchioness Glendour! Her landlady was a harsh woman, who, seeing no chance of obtaining any money from her lodger, gave her notice to quit. In vain Isabel protested against the barbarity of such treatment. Where was she to go? what was she to do? It is true that a letter addressed to the Countess Bucanan might have obtained her a few pounds; but her pride would not permit her to write to her mother. One afternoon she found herself forcibly ejected from the house in which she had found a temporary home. She carried her child in her arms. The snow lay thick upon the ground; the nipping frost had made it hard and crisp. A keen, biting easterly wind tore up the streets, and whirled small, sharp-cutting particles of snow into the faces of pedestrians. Isabel shuddered as she pulled her scanty clothing more closely around her, and tried to screen her wailing infant from the cruel wind. She wandered mechanically into Piccadilly, and walked up and down before the club houses. Many gentlemen, thinking she was begging, and being moved to compassion by the extremity of the weather, commiserated her sufferings and offered her money. Two halfpence and the silver fell from her half-frozen fingers on the pavement. She would have none of it. Alms she wanted not. Probably death would come before the morning. Death for herself, death for her child! Happy oblivion for both. She stood outside a large building which was brilliantly lighted. The sound of mirth and revelry reached her ears. Was it fancy, or did she at intervals hear a voice which was but too familiar to her? Fascinated, she hung about the house, which was no other than Bartlett's. It was midnight. A shivering woman leant against a lamp post, as a gentleman, flushed with wine, elegantly dressed, emerged from the club, and stood a moment on the steps while he pulled his coat over his breast. Isabel uttered a cry. The gentleman passed her. She ran after him, and, clutching him eagerly by the arm, cried in accents of the wildest joy, "Edward, Edward! do you not know me? 'Tis I, Isabel, your wife! Isabel, whom you used to love so fondly and call your darling angel?"

CHAPTER XXVI.

ISABEL IS REPULSED.

EDWARD LESLIE started slightly, but instantly recovering his serenity, looked coldly at the miserably clad woman who was beseeching his protection.

"I do not recognise you," he said.

"Am I so much altered?" Isabel said, while her tears fell fast.

"To me you became as one dead," he continued, "when you forgot me for Glendour."

"I loved him not; my mother compelled—"

"Tell me no untruths!" cried Edward Leslie sternly. "What I saw with my own eyes I will believe. Scarcely had my body sunk below the waves, as you fancied, than you hastened to Bucanan Park, and—but why should I heap up evidence against you? Whose child have you in your arms?"

Isabel cowered before him. There was so much concentrated hatred in his tone that her heart sank within her, and she began to fear that, in hoping for his forgiveness, and a consequent reconciliation, she had been cherishing a phantom.

"Glendour is ruined; Harold is in my power, and has been taught to hate his mother; you are an outcast," continued Edward Leslie; "and I am avenged."

"O, Edward," cried Isabel frantically, "you must not, shall not, leave me thus! If, as you say, you are avenged, you can afford to be magnanimous, and forgive a wretched woman, whose only fault has been loving you too well, and who has been the victim of wicked plots."

"Go!" exclaimed Edward Leslie, relentlessly.

"You bid me depart from you on a night like this? O, by the memory of the past, I conjure you to have mercy! For months I have been wandering about in search of you, feeling sure you would pity my distress, and take me back into your heart, from which I should never have been banished had it not been for the machinations of my mother."

"I will have nothing to say to you," answered Edward Leslie resolutely. "Every tie that once existed between us is severed."

"I shall die before morning, cried Isabel plaintively. "He knows I shall die, and he will not save my life."

"It is fitting and proper that such traitresses should die," he exclaimed.

"But my child! I may have done wrong—he?"

"Can you ask me to commiserate his child?" hissed Leslie between his clenched teeth, interrupting her. Go, both of you!"

"O, my God!" said Isabel, "he is leaving me."

Leslie had indeed gone a few paces, but he apparently changed his mind and returned.

"If," he said, "you wish for a little money to prolong your misery, I will freely give it you."

Putting his hand in his waistcoat pocket, he drew forth a sovereign, and handing it to her, exclaimed:—

"This is Edward Leslie's charitable donation to the Marchioness Glendour!"

The cutting sarcasm of this speech was utterly lost upon Isabel. Seeing that there was no love to be obtained from him, no paradise to be regained, but only a paradise utterly and irretrievably lost, and given up to the dominion of a hideous snake, she felt a new spirit springing up within her. Yes. Cold, wretched, hungry as she was, that pride of which her mother boasted, and which must have been only slumbering within her, awoke. She would have none of his charity.

"Take back your gold, Edward Leslie!" she cried; "it was But no matter. You, I wanted from you. Heaven knows I have breast which will in time prove to you that I am not the weak and silly creature you take me to be. I can see that it is not the lambs who inherit this world, but the lions; with the latter will I class myself. If you have lived for revenge—"

"And enjoyed it," he interpolated.

"If you have lived for revenge and enjoyed it," she went on, accepting his interpolation, "so will I."

Edward Leslie looked contemptuously at her, as if he wondered what a poor, ruined, heart-broken thing like herself could do.

"You don't believe me," she exclaimed, noticing the incredulous expression of his face, which was made dimly visible by the sickly glare of the gas lamps.

"I don't," he answered; "and if ever you do me the slightest harm, I will freely forgive you. Now go; I can waste no more time over you. Stay. I may as well inform you that Glendour is a blackleg on the turf and prisons yawn for him."

With this parting shot Edward Leslie turned carelessly on his heel and walked away. Scarcely had he gone before a policeman approached Isabel, and after regarding her suspiciously for a few moments, exclaimed, "Now, then, mother, move on. I can't have you sort of characters loitering about here."

"If you please, will you direct me to the nearest workhouse?" she said.

"O, that's your game, is it? Didn't you get nothing out of that swell I saw you talking to?"

"Nothing; it was not my intention to do so. Will you please give me the information I require, or shall I apply to some one else?"

"You're mighty particular for a female casual," cried the constable; "but I don't mind telling you that Mount street is the nearest workhouse, though I doubt whether the casual ward is not full by this time, and on such a night as this."

"Thank you; I'll take my chance," said Isabel.

Away she went, as well as her trembling limbs would allow her. The interview which had just taken place between her and Leslie had made her imbibe a sudden resolution to live. He had taunted her, he had gloated over her misery. Well, she would gloat over his wretchedness and taunt him. She found the workhouse in Mount street, Grosvenor Square. Abject poverty jostled magnificent luxury. Life is made up of contrasts. They took her and her child in. The Marchioness Glendour underwent the horrors of a London workhouse in the middle of winter. The next morning she went back to the lodgings she had lately left, and had an interview with the landlady, who would not allow her to come into the house, but stood with the door in her hand talking to her.

"Have you brought me my rent?" was the woman's first question.

"No; but I have come to tell you how to get it?" answered Isabel.

"How?"

"Allow me to write a letter to a lady; you can take it yourself; and I will guarantee a reply accompanied by money."

"Who is the lady?"

"The Countess Mirabel Bucanan."

"Where does she live?"

"Carlton Gardens, Pall-Mall."

"I shall take no begging letters," exclaimed the woman. "How do I know I shan't get kicked out of such a fine house? What is the Countess Bucanan to such trumpery as you?"

"She is my mother," answered Isabel, quietly.

"What! are you in earnest?" cried the landlady in astonishment.

"Perfectly so."

"And who are you?"

"I am the Marchioness Isabel Glendour. Events took place last night which have produced a complete revolution in my mind. I have quarrelled with all my friends, and estranged myself from them; but I have only to write, as I tell you, and obtain not only forgiveness but money. Stand on one side, my good woman, and allow me to enter. Depend upon it you will find your account in being civil to me."

The woman, utterly astounded and unable to believe Isabel, nevertheless moved on one side. Isabel went into the sitting room, handed the baby to the landlady, and, sitting down at the table, began to write a note in an elegant and ladylike hand.

"MY DEAR MOTHER," she wrote, "now that poor Glendour is ruined, I see the utter folly of which I have been guilty. I hear that he is gambling on the turf. As his property was lost by gambling, do you not think, if he were induced to retake possession of his estates so squandered, his enemies would be unable to legally dispossess him of them?

"I wish now to be reconciled upon Edward Leslie. It matters not why. I declare the fact. I am in want. Send me some money by the bearer of this letter and I will come to you promptly to devise means to vindicate the honor of my family, of which I am as jealous as yourself, and to rescue poor Glendour from the toils of his enemies.

"Your penitent and affectionate ISABEL."

"There, Mrs. Russell," exclaimed Isabel, as she folded up the letter, incased it in an envelope and handed it to her landlady, "take that, if you please, at once to Carlton Gardens."

Mrs. Russell was in a mist; she scarcely knew what she was saying or doing.

"Fancy having a real live marchioness in my house," she muttered; "but no. I can't and won't believe it."

Descending into the kitchen, she opened the letter by placing the adhesive over some hot water, and read it. The contents she afterwards gave some hot water, and read it. The contents she afterwards bore out part of Isabel's statement. She went to Carlton Gardens. The epistle was sent up to the countess, who gave Mrs. Russell, with her own hands, a reply, with which she hastened home. Isabel was anxiously awaiting her return.

"Here is a letter for you, my dear," exclaimed Mrs. Russell.

Isabel took it eagerly, tore it open and found the five-pound notes and a slip of paper, upon which was written:—

M. B."

"Let me see you as soon as possible.

"What do I owe you, Mrs. Russell?" inquired Isabel.

"Near upon one pound fifteen, miss—that is, ma'am—I mean, my lady," stammered Mrs. Russell.

"Take this five-pound note. Never mind the change; you have done me a service; you may keep it."

Overpowered by this generosity, Mrs. Russell burst into tears and exclaimed:—

"If I'd a thought you'd been what you are, O, good Lord, how different I'd have acted!"

"There, that will do," exclaimed Isabel; "take some more money and bring in everything that is wanted. Also, give me back the pawn-tickets you purchased from me; I shall have to send you after the things presently; and let me have to-day's paper, if you please."

These commands were speedily obeyed, and Isabel, after enjoying an excellent dinner and such wine as the public house afforded, felt that she could forget her troubles. Now and then a sort of hysterical sob, which she could not repress, would break out. She took up the paper and glanced listlessly over its columns. The advertisements next caught her eye. One, in particular, arrested her attention. It ran as follows:—

"Wanted, a confidential companion, who can give high references. A lady accustomed to society preferred. Apply, in the first instance by letter, to Mrs. Zerlina Leslie, Paradise Lodge, East Shene, near Richmond."

A smile flitted across Isabel's face.

"Fortune favors me," she murmured; "Zerlina, his Zerlina—for I cannot doubt that it is the same—shall find her confidential companion in me. Probably I shall come little in contact with him; but should I do so, I dare say a skillful disguise will assist my plans, and set his suspicions at defiance."

Matters were becoming complicated. The tables were returning to an equipoise. It only required an effort on Isabel's part to turn them against Edward Leslie.

NOTICE.

ADVERTISERS must hand in their favors before 6 o'clock on Monday evening, in order to have them appear in that week's issue.

To Correspondents.

WARNER B. B. C., South Danvers, Mass.—1. They win two balls. 2. The challenging party furnishes the second. 3. The best two games out of three is customary, but if nothing to the contrary be said before playing, one game will suffice. 4. If the umpire has reason to believe that the striker, in calling for a ball hip high when he usually strikes at one shoulder high, intends to deceive the game, he would be justified in calling three strikes on him.

W. R. W., New Orleans, La.—1. Aaron Jones is a Gentile. 2. It makes no difference where born—there are Jews of every nation. Think you, that all Jews are born in Jerusalem? A look nearer home would solve that question easy enough. The Jews "as is Jews" are supposed not to intermarry with Gentiles, but there are plenty who do, nevertheless.

S. W., Ballardvale.—As Jemmy Massey fought Bill Hayes at 8st. 6lbs., and his first fight was at 8st. 6lbs., he must certainly have fought over the last named weight between his first and last battle, about eighteen in number. He was matched with Jemmy Welsh at 9st., but forfeited £100 on account of his inability to get to that weight.

OLD BALTY.—"Cutting John Price" was not recently shot dead in Baltimore, as asserted in the columns of a contemporary—on the contrary Price killed Clint James (one of Collyer's favorite seconds) at the American Theatre, Baltimore, on the 9th of May of last year, for which he is now supposed to be in jail.

HORATIO, Philadelphia.—1. Born June 13, 1845, and made her first appearance on the stage at the Holliday Street Theatre, Baltimore, Md., as Sally Scraggs, during the season of 1857–8. 2. She is the divorced wife of Carlo Patti, the violinist, and brother of Carlotta Patti.

UNION, Camden, N. J.—The umpire has a perfect right to call any ball on a pitcher which he considers unfair, but after the batsman struck three times and the last ball had been caught, he was wrong in calling a ball. He should have called the ball before it had been caught.

JENNINGS, Baltimore, Md.—We stated at the time that it was all a matter of opinion. It was not intended as the "picked nine of the United States." It is generally conceded that Pratt is a better pitcher than McBride, because he is more tricky. Beach is better than Crane.

UNKNOWN, Detroit.—As Barney Aaron has something more profitable to attend to than fighting in such a time and for such an amount, you had better try your luck with some body nearer home. When next you write to challenge any body a deposit must be sent on to meet with attention.

ASPIRANT, Richmond.—1. You could learn more in one day from a regular performer than you could in a month from any books published on the subject. 2. You could, no doubt, get with a variety company by making application to the manager.

JOE D., Pittsburgh.—Sam Hurst and Tom Paddock were the first two men who fought for the Champion Belt of England after Heenan and Sayers. Hurst winning, and in turn being defeated by Jem Mace, who had to succumb to Tom King.

QR. MR. SERG'T.—The poem which you "have written expressly for the CLIPPER" has been going the rounds for several years. We published it, we think, six; also, it being a go for your opponent, and you playing an ace, entitled you to seven for sequence and one for last card.

A. W. S., Wawassett Ball Club, Wilmington, Del.—The umpire's ruling was quite correct, as the members objected to had no right to play. The Wawassetts are therefore the champions, unless their opponents obey the umpire's fiat.

J. M. R., Philadelphia.—1. The technical phrase is "tight ringer" and "loose ringer." The former touches the hub and counts one. 2. Yes, a "loose ringer" can be beat by a quoit that is nearer to the hub.

W. W., Cleveland.—1. See answer to "Bad Writer" in our last issue. 2. His life and death is veiled in a deep mystery. Messrs. Maguire & Risley have published a card denying the report that e died.

W. G., Mayville, N. Y.—The umpire has a right to call a game during a rain storm, but after what took place his decision was unwarranted. The bets go the way the ball does.

THREE ENGINE, Washington, D. C.—The average dimensions of a first class boat are as follows:—46 feet in length, 20 inches in width and 180lbs. in weight.

DOUGLASS, Chicago.—"The Menken's" movements are always chronicled in our foreign theatricals, upon which keep your weather eye

J. H., Bangor, Me.—1. "Owen Swift on Boxing" is about as good as any. 2. Definitions of the different terms will be found therein. 3. Write to Dick & Fitzgerald, Ann street, this city.

A. M., St. Louis, Mo.—Five innings not having been played, neither side can claim the ball. Where a player is injured in a game it is customary to put some one in his place.

J. E. C., San Francisco.—Billy Jordan, the original pugilist and pedestrian, has been dead these ten years, we are informed. Of his namesake in your city we know nothing about.

A FRIEND OF DENNY H.—James Tyler, otherwise known as Mose Tyler, resided in Philadelphia previous to going to Cleveland. A letter directed to this office will find him.

DENNY N., Chattanooga, Tenn.—Don't know Dunnigan—if you mean Warburton, "they say" he did. We know nothing positive. Race Bolster might post you.

C. H. KIMBALL, Junction City, Kansas.—1. That issue is exhausted. Have credited you with the amount sent. 2. Will be pleased to hear from you whenever convenient.

ONE OF THE SUFFERERS.—If the members of the company are averse to attaching their names to the article, we should not be expected to assume the responsibility.

FRED. A., East Boston.—You might get about $15 a week in a good circus company at the start, and if a good performer probably $30 afterwards.

POOR CARLOTTA.—1. The lady is living in California, married and settled. 2. Wood's Theatre, the National and Theatre Comique.

J. H. BLAKE, Ft. Foote, Md.—Our issue of that date is exhausted. We cannot recommend you to any at a convenient distance.

S. A. SOLOMON, Lewiston, Me.—1. One mile in 6 minutes 18 seconds. 2. No record of three and five mile time. 3. In this country, W. E. Harding, of this city.

J. C. L.—The Broadway Theatre was opened Sept. 27, 1847. The last performance was given April 2, 1859. The building was pulled down the same month.

J. H. H., West Manchester, Pa.—Josh Ward's 13:53 is the best on record. Brown made it in 14;40 and Hamill in 16:15¾. Brown's time at Boston in 1866 was 17:10.

ENQUIRER.—His right name is James Bumbles. He carried on the shoe business in Wheeling, West Va.

P. A. K., Philadelphia.—Try Jennings' ointment for your "dorg."

MULLER, Barrow street, N. Y.—B was entitled to one point for each Jack turned up.

C. AND P.—Lotta has played in Boston within two years. She opened at the Howard Athenæum, Jan. 22, 1866, for three weeks.

R. O. C.—1. We have not heard of the lady for a long time. 2. Annie Yeamans is in the far West. 3. They are his pupils.

R. H. F., Port Henry.—We know nothing of the parties except what appears in their advertisement.

P. S. O.—It is not necessary to understand the French or any other language except the English to become a good actor.

T. D., Springfield, Mass.—A letter for Jim Turner, if sent to the New Orleans Post Office, will no doubt reach him.

H. C., Brooklyn.—F wins. The Irvingtons were beaten by the Athletics before the former defeated the Atlantics.

TULLIUS.—We have no time to reconstruct your lines, and in their present shape they are inadmissable.

F. N., Philadelphia, Pa.—It will not be published in book form we think.

R. M. Z., Harrisburg, Pa.—1. It is a mere matter of opinion in regard to the papers named. 2. Dexter.

OLD CHESS CONTRIBUTOR, Brooklyn, N. Y.—Ground oats mixed to a paste and worms, make very good food.

MAGGIE, New Orleans.—Fifty dollars sent by express will settle the affair all right.

A. P. S., Lynn, Mass.—1. The Unions have only won one match. 2. We could not say.

W. W., Philadelphia.—The new Herald building is on the site formerly occupied by Barnum's Museum.

FORT WAYNE READER.—It is not a legitimate pitch. When the arm is not kept straight it is a throw.

GEO. P. WELLANS, Greensboro, Miss.—Cannot give you the address of such a person.

E. C. C., Millersburg, O.—The letter to which you refer has not been received.

LEAGUE ISLAND, Philadelphia.—Collyer whipped McGlade in 35 minutes.

ROCHESTER.—6 minutes and 18 seconds, by Wm. H. Boyd, the North Star.

D. P. J., Cincinnati.—We have no room for such articles just now.

A LOOKER-ON.—Only once. See Ford's card elsewhere.

W. G., Syracuse.—Such items are always acceptable.

NOVICE, Philadelphia.—103 Elm street.

M. ASKEY, Mound City.—It is pronounced crow-kay.

LEONARD, Philadelphia.—The decision was correct.

MARCELLUS BAKER.—We have a letter for you.

JOHNNY CARMAN.—And one for you.

C. A. M., Boston, Mass.—Do you mean by man or horse?

THE COMING THEATRICAL SEASON.

In the course of a few weeks the theatrical season of 1867-'8 will be fairly inaugurated, as many managers hereaway have announced their intention of opening their houses during the latter part of the current month or early in September, while those in the South will not commence operations much before October. There seems to be a great diversity of opinion in reference to the prospects of the coming campaign, managers who have heretofore been successful being under the impression that there will be no falling off in business, while those who were unfortunate in their speculations see in the future nothing but hard times and a depressed condition of the drama. It is quite true that there are more performers in the country at present than there is employment for, the exaggerated stories of fortunes being made in a single season having induced hundreds in the various departments of the amusement world abroad to embark for the land of promise, the great world of the West. Many of these had their golden dreams dissipated during the past season, and some few who had the means returned home in consequence; but the great majority of them yet remain with us, and will take their chances with our own people; we should not, however, advise others of our foreign relations to visit our shores until it is made clear that their services will be in demand, for what with heavy traveling charges, exorbitant hotel bills and incidental expenses almost without number, "a stranger in a strange land" will cut a sorry figure unless he has a well-filled purse, or a sure and steady engagement. Strangers, as well as a few of our own people, are frequently led astray and defrauded by irresponsible speculating parties who arrogate to themselves the title of manager. These characterless individuals are to be found in the drama, in minstrelsy, in the show world generally, seeking whom they may ruin by promises never to be fulfilled. There are numbers of good, deserving men and women in the profession, whose misfortune it may be to be out of a situation, and, having families depending on them, they are ready to clutch at the first opportunity for employment that is offered them. A week or two since we made mention of a minstrel manager who, after using his people as long as it served his purpose to do so, suddenly left them, somewhere in the west, to their own resources, he at the same time being indebted to nearly every man in the troupe. In a strange place, without means, they were compelled to leave their wardrobes as security for the payment of a sum which would enable them to reach their homes; this same adventurer not only cheated various members of his band, but also defrauded printers and others as he kept moving on. Another case has been recently brought to our notice, in which a number of people in the dramatic profession are the victims. A keeper of a hotel in one of the Delaware river towns of New Jersey, some time ago came to this city, and by a liberal display of money and a profusion of promises induced a company of needy actors and actresses to enter his employ for a traveling dramatic campaign. For several weeks they did a remunerative business. At New Brunswick, N. J., this adventurer suddenly decamped, leaving hall rent, musicians, printers, company's salaries and hotel bills unpaid. The case was one of peculiar hardship for the company, as their baggage, wardrobe, and scenery belonging to two of the members, were seized and held for the defaulting manager's liabilities. Thus not only are these poor players wronged of the just proceeds of their labor, but the very means by which they live are withheld from them. Such cases are of quite frequent occurrence, and we refer to them here in order to put strangers and our own confiding people on their guard against these adventurers, who disgrace the name of manager, and bring the profession into disrepute wherever they venture.

That the drama and kindred amusements have made rapid progress in America within the past ten years cannot be denied; that this progress is still onward is equally true, for in nearly all the principal towns of the North, and in many cities of the South, new theatres and halls have been erected of late, and at the present time others are in course of construction. By careful, judicious management, these establishments seldom fail to pay a good interest for the money invested. Companies are necessary for all these new houses, and that has helped to make a brisk demand for performers during the past five years; but the market has been overstocked, and the supply just now exceeds the demand; although no first class performer need be without employment even now. The growth of the legitimate has not been equal to that of the sensational, or variety branches. Tragedy, save in a few instances, does not flourish; frequently, it is almost wholly deserted. Spectacles, burlesques, variety entertainments into favor, and taken the place of what we call the legitimate. At the present writing this species of entertainment has not, in our opinion, reached its culminating point; the public have not tired of the beautiful faces and forms of the dancers, nor has their admiration lessened for the scenic splendors and novel effects which are now introduced in all sensational plays and even in certain of Shakespeare's great works. Yes, truth compels us to admit that even Forrest and Booth find it necessary to clothe the production of the immortal bard in scenes, costumes, and appointments such as were not dreamed of ten years ago, in order to make them attractive to the public, and therefore remunerative to manager and star.

There will be an attempt to revive the legitimate drama during the coming season, and to crush out the sensational, or "naked truth," as brother Smythe terms it; but this effort "will fail of its purpose," we opine. There will be a great struggle for supremacy between the "old and the new school," the former led by Mrs. Lander, Madame Ristori, Edwin Forrest, Edwin Booth, etc.; and the latter by Managers Wheatley, McDonough, Wallack, etc., but "in our mind's eye" we can see that victory will perch upon the banners of the latter. The climax may be reached next year by the new school, but not before. Tragedy, unless in the hands of a combination of stars and first class performers, will not retain the boards successfully for more than a few weeks at a time. One great actor and scores of those of mediocrity will no longer be tolerated; to make the legitimate succeed, all the characters must be sustained by competent first class people. Managers find that the sensational drama is the paying card at present; they derive more profit from the "naked" than from "full dress" performances; scenic splendors, mechanical changes and novel effects now play a prominent part in our dramatic representations; when to these are added the physical charms and artistic displays of the ballet, it is not surprising that the masses of the people affect the latter, and give the cold shoulder to the legitimate. Good plays, well mounted and well dressed—or undressed, whichever you please—will form the staple attraction the coming season. Money liberally and judiciously expended in the mounting of pieces will pay in the end; a close, stingy management will not answer in these days of progress. And, let us say to managers everywhere, when you get hold of a good thing advertise it liberally; let the public know that you have something that will please them—if it is a good thing, if you have placed it on the stage properly and in a liberal manner, he who sees it once will advertise it gratis for you afterwards, and return with a friend, to enjoy it again; but don't advertise anything that is not good. By proper management, harmony between manager and people, and the presentation of novelties well acted, well dressed and liberally advertised, the coming season may be made a successful one.

GONE DOWN.—In Texas corn in the ear has fallen from two dollars to seventy-five cents. In this direction corn in the mouth has gone down equally rapid. "Our Jim" says he wishes he could make as favorable a report of corn on the toe, which nothing seems likely to reduce.

THE BUNCH OF FIVES.—Pugilism has become so popular that there is a great rush every week to witness the latest display of the manly art. In fact the competition is so great to be first at the ring side that we may not inaptly term it a "mill" race.

TALE OF A RAT.—A rat hunt is now being prosecuted with great determination near Florence, Ohio, two parties being on the trail. The party showing the least number of tails at the close of the summer is to pay the expenses of a rat-tling barbecue.

A BIG THING.—In Paterson, N. J., one of the largest dye houses in America is being erected. We were under the impression that our alms house, [illegible] was the most extensive die house in this country.

SOMETHING NEW.—A convict in the Illinois State Prison has received a patent for a new machine for turning wagon axles. We don't know of anything better for turning axles than the simple wheel.

CHANGE.—A young man named Mason was sent to Sing Sing last week, convicted of breaking into houses. He is now engaged in breaking stone, or, rather, he has become a stone Mason.

GOOD NEWS.—Those who supposed that the cotton crop had made a bust will be pleased to learn that the report is unfounded.

THE SCULLING CHAMPIONSHIP.

James Hamill and Walter Brown Matched,

TO ROW FIVE MILES ON THE HUDSON,

FOR $2,000 A SIDE.

ARTICLES OF AGREEMENT.

In our last issue we announced the acceptance of Hamill's propositions by Walter Brown, and intimated the likelihood of another match being consummated between these famous oarsmen, the representative pullers of Pennsylvania and Maine, and the two most prominent exponents of the short and long stroke on our waters. This week we have the pleasure of announcing the verification of our predictions, and laying before our readers the articles of agreement, entered into in this city, on Monday, the 12th inst., Hamill having come all the way from the City of Smoke to make the arrangements. Charles B. Elliott, of Greenpoint, L. I., represented Brown at the meeting, while Denny Leary acted for Jimmy. The result of the last race between these men caused more dissatisfaction and excitement in rowing circles throughout the country than any similar match that ever took place here, and will have the effect of investing the present match with much more than ordinary interest. We subjoin the articles:

ARTICLES OF AGREEMENT.

NEW YORK, August 12, 1867.

ARTICLES OF AGREEMENT between Walter Brown, of Portland, Maine, and James Hamill, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

ARTICLE II. Any boat swerving from a direct course in order to impede the progress of the other boat shall be ruled out.

ARTICLE III. The boats shall toss for chance of position before starting in the race.

ARTICLE IV. The race shall take place at [illegible] on the Hudson River, on Friday, September 6th, 1867, between the hours of 2 and 4 o'clock, P. M., the race to be five miles, two and one half miles to the stake boat and return, to start with the tide, turning the stake boat from left to right.

ARTICLE VI. The boats shall be started at the word go, said word to be given by the referee. Time shall be taken when the winning boat crosses the line.

ARTICLE VII. The race shall be for Two Thousand Dollars ($2,000) a side.

ARTICLE VIII. Two Hundred Dollars a side shall be deposited in the hands of the stakeholder at the time these articles are signed. Eight Hundred Dollars on Tuesday, August 20th, between the hours of two and three o'clock, at the office of Wilkes' Spirit of the Times, and the balance, One Thousand Dollars a side, on Monday, September 2d, between the hours of two and three o'clock, at the CLIPPER office; either party failing to come forward and put up the deposit at the time stated in these articles, shall forfeit the amount previously in the hands of the stakeholder.

ARTICLE IX. If the day named is unsuitable, the race shall take place on the first fair day thereafter.

Signed. { C. B. ELLIOTT, for Walter Brown,
DENNIS LEARY, for James Hamill.

JAMES H. BIGLIN, } Witnesses.
JOHN C. GROGAN. }

THE SURRATT TRIAL.—This long-winded affair was brought to a close on the 10th inst. with the discharge of the jury, who were unable to agree. This result was not unexpected, considering the loose swearing on both sides. A fresh trial on some other charge, probably, will have to be had, and testimony manufactured to meet the views of a new "twelve good men and true." Another result of this extraordinary trial is a threatened "mill" between Judge Fisher and Mr. Bradley, one of Surratt's counsel, the former having wiped out the latter in the Court over which he, Judge Fisher, presides) for cause. When such high-minded people as judges and lawyers "fall out and chide and fight," surely there should be some allowance made for the meek and lowly disciples of the manly art, whose surroundings are not always of that "refined and dignified character" which are supposed to influence our legal brethren and administrators of justice. It is to be hoped, for the reputation of our Courts, that the proposed mill between the "legal belligerents" at Washington may be averted by "magisterial interference," and society be saved the disgrace of a "brutal exhibition" between our steel-clad public monitors.

IMPROVEMENTS.—A watering place correspondent of one of the daily papers, says that several improvements are to be introduced at Long Branch next season, one of which is a police department.

NOT SO.—A paragraph is going the rounds of the papers to the effect that Miss Vinnie Ream denies that she is going to take Gen. Lee's bust. Who is this Ream? in-quires a correspondent. [illegible] the religious weeklies will take notice, have been well attended by pickpockets the present season. Like the law which they violate, they are no respecters of persons.

ON THE LAY.—A number of bricklayers of Boston were on a strike last week, and, having nothing else to do, had made "back-stretchers" of themselves.

IMPORTANT!—Through the most reliable sources of information we learn that "President Johnson is about to reconstruct his cabinet."

"IDLEWILD," the home of the late N. P. Willis, has been let for school purposes. In future it is to be the resort of idle, wild boys.

SUICIDAL ACT.—Horace Greeley has taken his own life—in the New York Ledger.

SECRETARY SEWARD is the "boy with the Auburn heir."

THE RING.

☞ We have letters for Sam Collyer, Barney Aaron, Dan Noble, Patsy Sheppard.

MATTERS PUGILISTIC AND OTHERWISE IN THE LAKE CITY.

SPUNKY CHALLENGE FROM SEWARD TO FOGERTY.

"Since the Seward-Fogerty fight," writes our old Cleveland correspondent, under date of Aug. 9th, "there has been a great deal of fight talk, blowing, etc., among the pugs as well as others and as Fogerty is now on a sparring tour through the Empire State and will no doubt eventually bring up in Gotham, and has, I understand, been "blowing" a great deal about his whipping Seward, when in reality he, F., was whipped himself, and as Seward is not at all satisfied with the result of his first fight with Fogerty (i.e. the referee's decision), he is desirous of having another "go" with Dan and give him long odds, and I am authorized to issue the following challenge on behalf of Seward, viz.:—

Ed. Seward will fight Dan Fogerty according to the old rules of the P. R., at catch weight, and stake $1,000 to Fogerty's $500, to fight within four or six weeks from time of signing articles, the fight to take place within 100 miles of Cleveland, O. Man and money ready at T. F. Andrew's Saloon, No. 106 Seneca street, Cleveland.

Now if Dan Fogerty wishes to make a fresh match on the above (liberal) terms, let him or his friends call at the above mentioned place and put up a couple of centuries or so, and it will be covered instantly, sign articles, and it's a "go." Seward has plenty of backers and they are anxious to have him fight Fogerty again and give him (F.) the odds of two to one. Will he come to terms? You can rest assured this is a bona fide challenge and Ed. means business. Will send a deposit to the CLIPPER office if you think it better to do so. I tell him I think it would look more as though he meant business, but many of his friends say they think Fogerty dare not fight him at all, and say challenge him through the CLIPPER first and see if he or his friends make any reply whatever.

A word as to the first fight between Seward and Fogerty. I was present and witnessed the whole of the fight, and a more unjust decision was never rendered by a referee. There was no foul. Seward had his man whipped, and I doubt very much whether Fogerty would have come again, but Jimmy Elliott was behind Fogerty and was bound to look after the interest of his man, and seeing no other way for him to win, claimed foul, and I think rather intimidated Charley Gallagher, who was referee, and Charley decided for Fogerty (i. e. allowed the claim of foul). Mr. Elliott told me after the fight that there really was no foul, but he saw no other chance to have his man win than by making the claim and insisting on it. All were perfectly surprised at the referee's decision, even Fogerty's backers and those who bet on him. You can draw your own inferences. It's rather a late day to write about the matter, but thought I would do so as I wish you to know the facts and truth about the matter.

We have been favored with the presence of quite a number of pugs from abroad within the past six weeks. We have had Jimmy Elliott, William Michael Davis, Denny Horrigan, Johnny Hickey, John Mackey and others whose names I do not now recollect. Davis, Hickey and Horrigan are still here. The two latter matched to fight on the 11th Sept. Hickey to vanquish (if he can) the "Bould Soger Boy" within an hour or loose the stamps, viz., $500. There begins to be some betting at evens on the Jones and McCool fight. Charley Gallagher has just arrived in town again, looking well. Sporting matters are somewhat dull here just now, a little racing each week, but plenty of base ball matches. We are trying to get up a regatta, in which it is expected Buffalo, Erie, Cleveland, Toledo, Sandusky and Detroit will compete; don't see any reason why we cannot succeed in having a good one. So we go. E. C."

THE GREAT WESTERN MATCH.

JONES VS. MCCOOLE.

The most glowing accounts from the respective training grounds of Aaron Jones and Michael McCoole reach us as to their state of bodily health and serenity as regards their victory, both of whom expect to win the great event of the 31st inst. Jim Cusick has got Jones in splendid trim, and it is said he looks ten years younger from the effects of the work and abstemious life he has led of late. McCoole's trainers, Messrs. Blake and Trainor, have all they can do to keep time with McCoole, who is noted for his endurance in training. Concerning the "eventful day," the St. Louis and Cincinnati "respectable" journals are doing all in their power to give it all possible publicity, and we shall not be surprised to see the name of the ground published in the Sunday papers of the 29th inst., as that has to be named at the last deposit, which occurs on the 24th. As an instance of this, we give the following extract from a Cincinnati paper:

"There appears to be much needless anxiety on the part of hundreds, among whom are many of our most respectable citizens, to secure positive information by the night of August 30th as to when and where to find the cars or boats, as the case may be, which are to convey the excursionists to the scene of the manly strife in muscle and endurance. This anxiety, already so much indulged in, is entirely needless, for the very reason that the Jones-McCoole excursion will be fully advertised for several days previous to the time for the mill. Tickets will be sold at only two or three places.

"It is very probable that the trip will be made on special trains instead of boats. If it should be by boats there will be two, one bearing Jones and the other McCoole, and conveying passengers at a certain sum per ticket for trip and fight. In view of these facts, persons who have been induced already to purchase bogus tickets may consider themselves victims of misplaced confidence without much danger of being in error.

"The managers of this affair intend to so conduct it that it shall not reflect any disgrace upon our city. No ruffianism will be tolerated. Both sides will so unite their strength as to nip in the germ any of those disgraceful disturbances that in this country have so frequently broken the harmony of the crowds outside the ring. Knowing that hundreds of very decent and respectable people from this city and vicinity intend to be present, they will use every possible effort to preserve order, and we confidently predict that they will succeed."

THE GLOVES IN PORKOPOLIS.—A joint complimentary was tended to Patsy Shepherd and his late opponent, Con Reardon, in Fenian Hall, Cincinnati, on Saturday night, 3d inst., which proved a good thing for both. The hall was filled so as to scarcely leave standing room for the crowd who came to see the performance of these noted young pugilists. The amusements of the evening opened with a set-to between Tim Gleeson and Young Brummagem, wherein both men showed many points and wound up with a regular milling round. Con Reardon and "Bum Johnny" followed, Reardon having much the best of it. After two novices had pummeled each other to the amusement of the audience, Patsy Shepherd and Pat Leech had a very exciting bout. Leech, a fine young fellow, is splendidly built and towered far above his chunky little antagonist, but despite a fair amount of science and advantages in size and weight, he had the wrong end of the line, Shepherd's quickness in ducking always taking him out of harm's way. Two friends, although not scientific, had it exciting enough and almost forgot they were friends before it ended. Patsy Shepherd and Jim Cain gave a most exciting set-to, both displaying their knowledge of the art in a high degree, and was far more exciting than that between Leech and Shepherd, the men being nearly of a size. Cain is pretty clever and Shepherd showed off like a first class pugilist. This was followed by three or four couple of lesser stars, and then came the treat of the evening, the wind-up between Patsy Shepherd and Con Reardon, both men rattling away like good fellows, the last round being a very hotly contested one. There is a marked difference in the men; Reardon long, lithe and wiry, and Shepherd a perfect picture of muscular development.

MINOR MILLS.—The past week has not been over fruitful in "scrub" fights for some reason or other, but what's been done hereaway in that line give we unto you.....Con Bradley and Dan McGill went out for a trial of "Muckle" at the Palisades on the 8th inst., and had a terrible time of it for three rounds, lasting nearly an hour, ending in a rough and tumble, with little or no regard to the rules of fair fighting. The referee was so disgusted that he threw up his office, when the melee became general and a Donnybrook fair scene was enacted, "shticks" and "shtones" being freely used on people's bones, raising bumps not easily defined by phren or any other kind of ologists. Amongst others whose crown was cracked, one of the Wood's indefatigables came in for it, the gang respecting neither friend or foe, nor those not interested on either side. It is said that $20 a side was at issue, but we pity the stakeholder if it was so. Tom Kavanagh and Mike Mansfield, of the "Bloody Fourth," had it on the dock near Fulton Ferry, New York side, on the evening of the 6th for nearly an hour without the sign of a cop. Twenty-three uninterrupted rounds decided Michael to be the boss at scrapping. Where was the brave club swinger, O'Brien..... G. Stebbins and J. Greary, much younger than poor Jerry O'Brien when he met his fate, having had several "emeutes" over a "benemort," went over to Paterson from Sixth Avenue and pitched into each other like old heads on the 9th inst., for the space of 40 minutes, in which 32 rounds were pulled through and Greary had to resign his claim to the g'nal by acknowledging Stebbins' superiority as a puncher and punisher.....Corns. Farnham and Bill Costigan were the buffers in a mill on the 6th, about five miles from Lackawaxen, Pa. Only two rounds were fought, Corns. drawing first blood in the first, but hit Costigan foul in the second, while William was on his knees. Foul was claimed, but after some twenty minutes arguing the point, the referee declared it a draw. It is said $300 was put up between them for contention, and that another $100 is to be added for another match. Farnham is the pug that fought Cregan some time ago. He weighed 140lbs. Costigan weighed 145lbs., and is 5 feet 11 inches in hight. The fight was for $150 a side. Farnham was seconded by Larry Tooley and Tom Cregan, not of 42d st. and 7th Ave., Costigan, by Tom Quinlan and Pat Kelly. .....Jack Creegan, of Dutchess county, and Tommy Warren, a Connecticut youth, had a battle royal of 56 rounds, lasting 2h. 47min., on the 11th inst., on the Erie road, fifty odd miles from Gotham, the Dutchess county representative coming out right side up, although not without being pretty badly pummelled..... Ed. Paget and Jack Tompkins, said to reside with their parents at Manhattanville, made an excursion to Newark Bay to warm each other, on the 11th, which they succeeded in doing admirably to the extent of 29 rounds, consuming 1h. 45min., Jack getting knocked out of time. They went to and from the scene of action in a sloop, about seventy strong.....Mike Doble and Jim Nunan, from the City of Churches, instead of dosing in the family pew, took a sail to Rockaway on the 11th, and when they got there went to work trying who could [illegible] for [illegible] being quite blind, was compelled to give in to the Brooklyn light weight's namesake.

HALF THE MONEY UP FOR MOORE AND ROOKE.—As our readers are aware, we now hold $500 a side on behalf of these lithe, wiry and skilful young pugilists for their eastern tournay, to come off on Oct. 2. As yet neither one has commenced active training, but from this out will go to work in earnest. Rocky Moore has the services of that experienced trainer, John Grindell, and will train at his own house, the Inwood, on the road to Jerome Park, and a few minutes walk from McComb's Dam, a pretty location, convenient to town for his friends as well as a delightful spot for the purpose. Rocky is "different" now, as Mel. Foster would observe, and having removed his facial adornments for the first time in a year or so, would hardly be known except by old acquaintances. Rooke, who still wears a cavalry when he shall have selected his trainer, (which he will probably do while in town,) and trains at his own house, the Albion Hotel, Westminster street, Providence. Rocky Moore, in conjunction with Joe Coburn, has a complimentary at the Old Bowery Theatre, on Monday evening, Aug. 26. The third deposit of $250 a side falls due two days before the benefit, viz.: Aug. 24, and singular enough, on the same day as the last $250 from Jones and McCoole has to be tabled in Cincinnati.

KICK UP BETWEEN TOM KING AND HIS BACKERS.—THE MATCH OFF.—Our New Orleans correspondent, writing on Tuesday, August 6, says:—"I hasten to inform you that since my last there has been much excitement among the prize fighters and the sports generally, and to-day reached a fever heat, owing to the refusal of Tom King to carry out his agreement to fight Jim Fitzgerald. King has stopped training and came to this city this morning. He complains bitterly of his friends and backers, and his backers and friends complain of his conduct. He asserts that the sum of four hundred dollars already staked is his own money, and that his backers would not come up with the balance. And now, instead of paying forfeit like a man, and as he has compelled others to do to him, he, yesterday, caused an injunction to be issued enjoining the stakeholder not to give up the funds. He was generally denounced last evening. I am acquainted with King, and have heretofore always known him as an upright and honorable man. I shall, therefore, refrain from any farther remarks until I hear the pros and cons, and can learn the true state of affairs, for there may be reasons for the strange course he has pursued yet unexplained. ROSCIUS."

TOM ALLEN'S CAREER.—It is not always safe to bet on the British Fistiana by long chalks, as we have from time to time declared, owing to its being full of gibsing errors. In our account of the career of Tom Allen, compiled from that authority (?) we were led into error, having since been informed by Allen that in addition to those of his fights recently published, he defeated White, in 20 rounds for £5 a side, April 2d, 1860; fought a draw with Nobby Hall, for £5 a side, lasting 40 minutes, Sept. 17th, 1860, the police stopping the sport; beat Clarke for £5 a side in 29 rounds 46 minutes, April 1st, 1861, (Fistiana has it Harry instead of Tom, in this latter instance,) and was the party matched against young Dan Crutchley, receiving £10 forfeit, owing to Dan's getting himself apprehended. Among other forfeits Tom Allen got were £50 from Bill Thorpe, of Leeds, £10 from Peter Millard, and £16 from Mike Cocklin. Allen stands 5ft. 10¼in. in his stocking feet, and in his early days fought as low as 127lbs., although his present fighting weight is all of 162lbs.

BAD FOR FOGERTY.—Denny Horrigan writes us that Daniel Fogerty, who recently fought Seward, has cheated nearly everybody who had dealings with him in Cleveland. Amongst other acts of ingratitude laid at Fogerty's door, it is stated that he beat a poor man out of $35 hall rent for a benefit, advanced; a tailor out of $24; a board bill of $15; the printer out of $12, and stuck the bill sticker for $3. It is also asserted that he neither paid his seconds, trainer nor bootmaker, and that instead of being a fighter, he lacks the very first requisite, courage. Denny furthermore says that he had the cheek to ask him (Horrigan) to travel and give exhibitions together, but Dennis couldn't see it, and "he then got another man like himself, Charles Gallagher," to use the writer's own verbiage, and "both intend making a big thing on their heroic fighting qualities." If these things are so, it would be as well for folks to keep a good look out for Master Fogerty.

CHANDLER VS. DWYER.—As considerable anxiety has been manifested in California concerning the match between Chandler and Dwyer, it has to be stated that no match is likely to be made between these two celebrities. The Dwyer party, who, by the way, seemed the most anxious for the match, called upon Chandler a few days since, and proposed a match for $2,000 a side. Chandler, however, refused point blank to make the match for anything less than $5,000 a side, a sum which the Dwyer parties are unwilling to stake. Chandler is said to be ready and willing to make a match for that sum at any time, and for nothing less; and, until they come to his terms, he desires to be allowed to attend to his legitimate pursuits uninterrupted. In the meantime, preparations are being made to have Dwyer go to San Francisco, where are waiting two other worthy aspirants for a position within the roped arena face-to-face with Billy—so says one of our California exchanges.

THE HICKEY AND HORRIGAN MILL.—The Match between Denny Horrigan and Johnny Hickey is creating a great deal of excitement in Cleveland and elsewhere. One hundred dollars a side was put up as the second deposit, on Thursday night, Aug. 1, at Hickey's saloon, 78 Merimon street, on which occasion nearly all the sports in town were there. The third deposit of $100 a side was made on Thursday evening, the 8th inst., at Johnny Sweetman's "Cottage," 76 St. Clair street, in the presence of another large crowd of friends of both parties. From present indications the fight promises to be a determined one, as both parties appear anxious for the contest. They go into training on the 12th inst. If the law in course of passage there, prohibiting any party from accepting a challenge or giving one, fighting a prize fight, backing or training for that purpose, does not intervene and stop it, a rattling mill may be anticipated.

SIM TURNER'S CHALLENGE.—The weight given in Turner's challenge last week should have been 27 lbs instead of 21 lbs.

JOE COBURN AND ROCKEY MOORE AT THE OLD BOWERY.—The next sensation in the sporting world in the nearly approaching joint complimentary benefit for Joe Coburn and Rockey Moore, to take place at the Old Bowery Theatre, on Monday evening, the 26th inst. The name and fame of the world wide ex-champion, and the fact of Rockey Moore's important match now on hand, will cause a great turn out in their favor. The trio of famous British gladiators—Ryall, Allen, and Morris—are positively to assist. Bill Ryall having a set-to with Joe Coburn, Tom Allen with Rockey Moore, and Peter Morris with Mickey Coburn. All the other celebrities, old and new, including Patsey Evans, the conqueror of Tom McGurran, are to show, and in addition to the boxing, pieces will be played and things ered that distance in 1min. 56½sec., besides being the winner of the mile cup, last run for on June 1. Fleet is in his 23d year, while M'Instray is twelve years his senior. When the mile and a half cup was run for on the 23d of February last, a mile was covered in 4min. 31sec., the same time, singular to state, as made by M'Instray for the mile cup. This, however, was in a great measure attributable to the manner in which John Neary forced the running for the mile and a half cup, the half mile for which was done in seven seconds less than when running for the mile cup, the respective times being 2:08 and 2:1 . Besides the fame attached to the names of Fleet and M'Instray, it so happened that they represented the interests of rival stables. M'Instray trained at Macclesfield, under Geo. Oldham, and Fleet, who stayed at his old quarters, had the advice and assistance of Charley Cooper, of Leeds. About 700 persons were present to witness the race, the start for which did not take place till after seven o'clock. Betting opened at 2 to 1 on Fleet, but later on as much as 10 to 1 might have been had. Fleet took the lead at starting, both going at a slow pace. After covering fifty yards, M'Instray went to the front, and continued to lead Fleet a couple of paces until 1000 yards had been gone over. A dozen yards from the straight run home, Fleet, who had evidently been waiting on his man, spurted ahead, and, without being afterwards neared, won by nine yards, after a good race. Time, first quarter, 1min 8sec: half mile, 2min 14sec; three quarters, 3min 20sec; mile, 4min 25sec.

DE KELSO AND HARDING'S GREAT FOOT RACE.—The three mile running match between De Kelso, the Canadian Wonder, and Harding, our representative from the U. S., postponed from Aug. 12 to Aug. 19, will take place on the last named day without fail. The postponement, which was at the Canadian's request, and for which his backers paid $200 for the privilege, will only lead to more talk and consequently more interest in its coming off. Harding, who leaves for the ground on the 16th or 17th inst., is brimful of confidence, as we presume the Canadian is also. How the betting is around Aurelia and vicinity we haven't heard, but Harding's stock is above par in this section. It is the New Yorker's intention to wear the national colors—blue trunks, ornamented with white stars, flesh-colored silk tights and a red morocco belt, lettered "Three Mile Champion of the United States." In view of the international character of the match, as the representative of the Dominion of Canada, it is probable that De Kelso will wear national colors, too, the race itself having to take place on British soil. It is anticipated to be one of the fastest races in the country, and we have a right to expect the winning time to come many seconds under 14 minutes. We hope there will be no excuse for the vanquished, whoever he may be, but that both men will be in the best possible condition, and that the quickest runner may win on his merits.

FOOT RACE AT ALLEGHANY, PA.—Johnny Newell—brother of the rotund Tony, ex music hall manager and publican—and Andy Hahn ran a two hundred yards race at the Union Skating Park, Alleghany City, Pa., on the 6th inst., for a purse of $200. There was a large attendance of spectators, and the betting on the result was quite brisk, odds ruling in favor of Hahn at 10 to 7 and 2 to 1. Johnny jumped away with the lead, was never headed, and, going like a race horse, won by fifteen feet in 22 seconds. Johnny is a very promising runner, and at the picnic of the Xantne Club, of Manchester, a few days prior, captured $25, beating five others.

WRESTLING MATCH BETWEEN PARSONS AND PETERS.—William Parsons, a newly arrived wrestling celebrity from the Creole State, and John Peters, of this State, had a tussle on the 8th inst., side holds, best two in three, near Peck's Dorp, up the Hudson River, for $150 a side, which the New Orleans man won after a lively struggle of nearly half an hour's duration. Parsons gained the first and third falls, Peters the second. The winner is said to be one of the best in the country. Should he come this way, we think he might meet his equal in muscle and skill.

ROBINSON VS. COLEMAN.—Owing to sickness, Robinson has been unable to answer Coleman until the present time, but just before going to press called and stated that he and his backer, Barney Aaron, will meet Coleman at the place named by him on Wednesday evening, the 14th, to arrange matters.

HORSE FAIR AT ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The denizens of the Flour City were all agog with excitement last week over the first great horse congress which has ever taken place in that locality. The races commenced on the 5th inst., and continued until the inclusive. The attendance averaged three thousand each day, principally residents of the city and vicinity, the Saratoga races proving a greater attraction to turfmen from other cities. We subjoin summaries of the different events:

TROTTING AT DIAMOND BEACH PARK, N. J.—An exciting trot took place at Diamond Beach Course, Cape Island, N. J., on the 7th inst., between Doble's Belle of Baltimore and mate, and Lady Guilford, in harness, for a purse of $2,000, mile heats, 3 in 5. Belle and mate took the first heat in 2:44½; Lady Guilford the second in 2:41½; and the third, made in 2:34¾, was so near an even thing that many disputed the correctness of the judges' decision that the Belle had won it. When the horses were called for the fourth heat, Sleaver, who piloted the Lady, refused to respond, declaring that he had won the third by a neck, whereupon the stakes were awarded to the Belle.

CHAMPIONSHIP SCULLING AT HALIFAX, N. S

GEORGE BROWN WINS AGAIN.

TALK OF SENDING HIM TO ENGLAND.

The annual sculling race for the champion belt of Halifax Harbor transpired on the 1st inst., and terminated in the victory of Brown, who also won it in the three prior years. Much interest centres in this event, and the attendance of spectators equaled that of any former occasion, although the betting was less spirited than usual, owing, no doubt, to its being regarded as a foregone conclusion for Brown. At 10 o'clock A. M. the following boats drew into line:—Petrel, James Percell; Camilla, George Brown; Tangier, Edward Tracey; Fidget, Joseph Higgins.

The start could not have been excelled. The Camilla led, and it was evident that the magnificent pulling of Brown must win. Throughout the whole course he kept the lead, and arrived at the goal about a dozen lengths ahead of the closest of his opponents. The Petrel gave up the race without going over the course. The contest between Higgins and Tracey excited a great deal of interest. The former led for half the course, and at Noble's wharf he was three or four lengths ahead of Tracey. The latter, however, rapidly overtook the Fidget, and when they neared the goal it was doubtful which of them would be successful. A few minutes decided in favor of the Tangier, which came in about two feet ahead of the Fidget. The rowing of the three men was splendid. Brown's stroke was magnificent, and even his opponents must admit that he is the best oarsman who has yet appeared on the harbor. Dr. Cogswell, the patriotic founder of the prize, witnessed the race, and was delighted with Brown's rowing. He proposed to the Secretary of the Royal Yacht Club that a subscription list be opened for the purpose of raising funds to send B. to England to contend for the championship, and generously offered to head the list with the sum of $200.

We subjoin the names of the persons who have won the belt at the ten contests since it was offered for competition:—

Bernard Gallagher, Sept. 8, 1858.
George Lovett, July 13, 1859.
Jeremiah Holland, Aug. 10, 1860.
George Lovett, Aug. 1, 1861.
George Lovett, Aug. 1, 1862.
George Lovett, Aug. 1, 1863.
George Brown, Aug. 1, 1864.
George Brown, Aug. 1, 1865.
George Brown, Aug. 1, 1866.
George Brown, Aug. 1, 1867.

It will be seen by the above that Lovett and Brown have each won the trophy four times, and another triumph will entitle either to its permanent possession. For some reason Lovett did not take a hand in this year. In regard to the proposition to send Brown to England, it is not probable that anything will come of it this year, as the season is rather too far advanced. If his friends think well enough of his powers to send him over there, we would suggest the propriety of pitting him against some of our crack pullers during the interim—say the winner of the anticipated match between Hamill and Brown. What say the Nova Scotians to the suggestion?

AQUATIC SPORT ON CHELSEA CREEK.

The result of the single scull race between George C. Davis, Jr., William R. Bagnell and W. F. Low, members of the Winnisimet Club, of Chelsea, which took place on Chelsea Creek several weeks since, caused much dissatisfaction in consequence of the foul claimed by Low. To put an end to the chafing and settle, once for all, the question of superiority, it was agreed to pull the race over again, which was accordingly done on the 9th inst., nothing being staked on the issue. The distance pulled was one mile and three quarters. The judges—William F. Sherburne, ex-commodore Frank W. Snow and President Isaac S. Dillingham—were stationed in the sloop Juliet, anchored near the draw of the bridge, and at the old East Boston bridge was stationed the stake boat, containing Mr. George C. Davis, Sr., and S. Bryant, Esq., who officiated as judges at that point. Shortly before seven o'clock the contestants came into position near the judges' boat and in the following order from the shore:—George C. Davis, Jr., lapstreak, Betsey; W. F. Low, shell, Fleetwing; William R. Bagnell, lapstreak, Fanny. After some delay a good send off was made, and almost immediately Low took the lead, while Davis fell astern, taking Bagnell's water. Low kept his advantage and gradually increased the space between himself and Bagnell. At the stake boat they rounded in this order, Low being about ten boat lengths ahead, while Davis was as many astern of all. Retaining this condition, Low made the distance in fifteen minutes and a quarter, Bagnell in fifteen minutes and forty seconds, and Davis in exactly sixteen minutes. Low was accordingly declared the winner of the race.

In connection with this race was one which was productive of considerable amusement to lookers-on. It was a tub race, and one could not but be reminded of what the frog said to the boy who was stoning it—"Fun for you, but death to me." Four entries—by Geo. C. Davis, Jr., who was pleased to christen his tub Walter Brown; Charles H. Davis with his John Tyler, Jr.; Frank H. Haskell in Josh Ward, and Wm. R. Bagnell in James Hamill. The conditions of this race were that the winning tub should have all the tubs, and the losers should not shave for a month. The tubs consisted of four half hogsheads, and, therefore, we suppose, registered a tun. Drawn up in line at Larkey's ship yard, and back of the centre of the creek where the turn-flag was stationed, a start was made. Seated like Diogenes, each in his own tub, the four made progress but slowly toward the point of turning. Soon the John Tyler, Jr., took the lead, closely followed by the Walter Brown. Bagnell, in the James Hamill, by stopping to lubricate his paddle shafts, lost way, and came very near taking the water. The curiosity of Haskell, in the Josh Ward, overcame his ambition to win, and accordingly he stopped to see how his fellow tubmen were propelling and to take a gentle laugh at the snail-like headway they were making. By this imprudent act the Josh Ward fell to the rear, and was soon lost in the maze of boats which surrounded him. The John Tyler was the first to round the stake. The Walter Brown followed, fouled with the stake, backed and filled almost with water, but at last went over the flag, the staff lying over on the water. The James Hamill whirled round and round until it rolled around the flag, and the three were fairly on the home stretch. Haskell came up slowly, and now it was time for the others to laugh. His craft became unmanageable as the steam began to give out, and for a while the tide seemed to have the best of it. He persevered and rounded the flag, went over it rather, and at last reached "home" in tow of a boat. Time was knocked all to pieces, and so were the arms of Haskell, which came too often in contact with the rough edge of the "gunwale" of his tub. The race was won by Charles H. Davis, who was followed by his brother and Bagnell in the order given.

REGATTA ON THE MYSTIC RIVER.

The first annual aquatic carnival of the Monument Boat Club, of Charlestown, Mass.—a new organization now in a very prosperous condition and numbering about twenty-five members—came off over the Mystic River course, from Chelsea to Malden bridges and return, a distance of two miles, on the afternoon of the 7th inst. The affair awakened much interest among the sport-loving portion of the community, who evinced the same by gathering in large numbers on the wharves, bridges, steamers and smaller crafts. Messrs. Wm. Blakie, H. M. Haynes, and Brennan, were appointed judges, their boat being anchored close by the Chelsea bridge. At 5 o'clock precisely the boats entered for the first race—for single scull wherries, for prizes of a silver pitcher and silk flag respectively—were called into line, two only entering, viz., Petrolia, manned by T. W. Holmes, and the Unknown, pulled by Charley Holmes, the first named drawing the inside position. The race was really no race at all, the Petrolia bounding away from her opponent at every stroke of her lusty oarsman, turning the outer stake about thirty lengths ahead and winning without effort in 17:45. Time of Unknown, 18:20.

This was followed by a double scull race for two prizes of silver medals and a silk flag respectively. The entries were as follows, the boats drawing positions in the order named:

Annie V., lapstreak, pulled by Manfred L. Goss, and J. A. Gardner.
Lizzie, shell, pulled by R. W. Sprague and Dan'l E. Poor.
Effie Deans, lapstreak, pulled by Charles A. Blanchard and Oscar Huntress.
Lillian, shell, pulled by Eugene Frost and R. D. Archer.

The boats got off well together upon the crack of the pistol, but it quickly became apparent that the race lay between the Lizzie and Annie V., they leaving their competitors in the lurch after going about twenty yards.

At the club house the Lizzie led the Annie a length, and the latter was four lengths ahead of the Effie Deans, which was a length in advance of the Lillian. No change of consequence took place until after the stake boat had been turned, except that the two leading boats gradually gained on the two astern. Coming home there was a very fine contest between the Lizzie and the Annie, the former maintaining her lead of a length until opposite the club house, about a third of a mile from the Judges' boat, and here the crew of the Annie made a very fine spurt, drawing a couple of lengths away, and all the other crew could do could not overcome it, and thus the boats passed the judges, the Annie V. taking the first prize in 16:50, the Lizzie the second, in 16:52, the Effie Deans third, in 18:03, the Lillian's time not being taken.

After the races the prizes were presented to the successful competitors by Mr. Blakie in brief complimentary addresses, and thus, in a most gratifying manner, ended the first regatta of this young club.

REGATTA OF THE ATALANTA CLUB.

WITHERS WINS THE BELT.

The annual sculling contest between the leading oarsmen of the Atalantas for the handsome silver belt, emblematic of the Championship of the Club—an event which is yearly looked forward to with deep interest by the members of the same, and with equal expectancy by their lady friends, to whom it is ever a day of unalloyed pleasure—came off over the usual course, from the judges' boat moored off the club house at the Elysian Fields, Hoboken, N. J., to and around a stake boat anchored one mile and a half up the Hudson, and return. A heavy shower of rain fell in the early part of the afternoon, which made things look gloomy for the Atalantas, and caused the blooming damsels and their sprucely gotten up beaux to pout and gaze malignantly at the opened heavens. Fortunately, however, before the hour appointed—five o'clock—the rain ceased, the clouds cleared away, and Old Solomon made his welcome advent, dispelling all dismal forebodings. Consequently a large number of spectators gathered along the shore adjacent to the course, while the steamer P. C. Shultz, chartered by the club, was crowded with a gay and brilliant assemblage. The judges chosen were—Benj. F. Brady, President of the Hudson River Rowing Association, H. A. Dingee, and J. G. P. Holden, editor of the Yonkers Gazette, and a gentleman much interested in aquatic matters. Charles A. Peverelley, who has been identified with boating matters in the metropolis for many years, and is the author of a valuable and comprehensive work on rowing, yachting and outdoor pastimes generally, officiated as referee, a position which he has oft before filled with ability.

The contestants on the present occasion were, W. C. Mainland, George Roahr, Alden S. Swan and Russell Withers. At about half-past five o'clock the word was given and the boats jumped away to a fair start, Swan catching the water first and after a few strokes succeeding in pushing his craft a few feet in front, and at the Weehawken Dock was a couple of lengths in advance followed by Roahr, Withers and Mainland in the order given. Swan kept the lead to the stake while Withers had succeeded in passing Roahr and was so close behind Alden at the buoy that he managed to round first, but a foul was the consequence, of which however, no notice was taken by Swan, he seeing that the race lay between him and Withers. A splendid contest was witnessed between them on the home pull, the boats remaining almost even for quarter of the distance, when Russ. plied his blades with increased vigor, sending his craft bounding through the water at a terrific pace and quickly leaving Swan half a dozen lengths in the rear. This the latter, putting on a dash, managed to close within a quarter of a mile of home, but Withers here put on another magnificent spurt, and dashing away again, shook off his opponent and crossed the score several lengths ahead in 25:30; Swan, 25:36; Roahr, 26:00; Mainland, 26:25.

OCEAN SWEEPSTAKES RACE.—A grand ocean sweepstakes race, open to all yachts belonging to the New York Yacht Club—now on its annual cruise, took place at Newport, R. I., on the 10th inst. The course sailed over was from the light boat at Brenton's Reef, in line with Beaver Tail Light, to a stake-boat, anchored about one mile East by North from the Light-house on Sandy Point, Block Island, distance forty miles. The schooner Palmer, owned by Capt. R. F. Loper, won in 5 hours 7 minutes, beating the Sappho, Idler, Fleetwing, Rambler, Dauntless, Nautilus, Eva and Maggie. The squadron was expected to disband there or at New Bedford, in a day or two. The cruise has been a very enjoyable one.

THE EMPIRE CITY REGATTA CLUB.—This popular Gotham institution held a meeting at the First National Club House, on Third avenue, between Fifty-third and Fifty-fourth streets, on Saturday evening, 10th inst., when the Club was re-organized under very favorable auspices. Another meeting will be held at the same place on Thursday evening, at 8 P. M., to elect prominent officers for the year.

BOATING MATTERS AT SPRINGFIELD.—The Springfield held a meeting on the evening of the 6th inst., when a committee was appointed to make arrangements for a six oared and wherry race, to take place the same day as the great four oared race between the Wards and St. Johnsrs. Preparations are making to erect seats on the wharf sufficient to accommodate several thousand persons.

ROYAL HALIFAX YACHT CLUB.—The race for the Prince of Wales' Challenge Cup came off between the sloops Goshawk, Wave, and Whisper, of the above club, on the 1st inst. The course sailed over was from the club property off Richmond to Meagher's Rock Buoy and return—a distance of seventeen miles—and the Wave won by 48 seconds.

BOAT RACE ON THE HARLEM RIVER.—Jas. Norris, of Spuyten Duyvil, and J. M. Brady, of Yorkville, pulled against each other in 17 foot working boats, distance, two miles, reputed to be for $100 a side, which Brady won after a good race in 17:48.

PIGEON SLAUGHTER AT SALTERSVILLE.—R. I. Williams and J. D. Harvey shot a match at pigeons, for $100 a side, at Saltersville, N. J., when Harvey, who was the favorite in betting, brought down seventeen of the feathered tribe within bounds and two without, to Williams' eleven inside and six outside. The conditions were to shoot at 25 birds, 18 yards rise; distance, 70 feet.

THE TRIGGER AT BAYONNE.—Thursday, the 8th, James Hannon and John Wilkin shot against each other as above, at twenty pigeons each, for $100 a side, so stated, James killing fifteen to John's thirteen.

CHALLENGE TO SHOEMAKERS.—"I, Jeremiah L. Rose, of Dover, New Hampshire, will bet any man in this State from $200 to $500 that I can make sixty pairs of men's kip shoes, after a pegging machine, quicker than the 'next man.' Challenge to remain open for thirty days."

ATLANTIC VS. MUTUAL.

THE CHAMPIONS VICTORIOUS.

These first class clubs met on Monday, Aug. 12th, at the Union Grounds, Williamsburgh, on very short notice, to play the first game of the season's series. From the popularity and well known antecedents of the rivals, an assemblage numbering not less than 10,000 encircled the green sward, upon which the victory was to be decided for the one or the other.

Though the clubs belong to opposite sections of the Metropolitan District, and contend for the supremacy of local prestige, no feeling beyond honorable rivalry ever existed, though they have met every season during the last ten years.

The occasion of the present game was no exception to this rule. Of the whys and wherefores of the loss of this game by the Mutuals, which astonished the ball fraternity, one and all, we may sum up in a few words. The appended score records only one "baulked" ball upon the pitcher for the Mutuals, when seven were called, and fortunately or unfortunately, as the case might be, upon five of these baulked balls men came home from the third base. It would be unfair to say, perhaps, that this was the cause of the Mutuals' loss or the Atlantics' gain, but that it materially contributed to it cannot be denied.

Beyond this, however, we must chronicle one of the best played games we ever witnessed, the work on both sides being "short, sharp and decisive," and rewarded the spectators—no matter whatever other effect it may have had upon those pecuniary interested. But the latter class could not have been numerous, as few would accept anything short of odds, which placed betting almost wholly out of the question. There were many individual plays made which we would like to particularize beyond what follows, but cannot.

We must not be considered in offering the

CANTO VII.

CIV.

The man who saves a human life is greater
Than he who takes a city;—so 'tis writ,
Or so 'twas writ in earlier times, but later
Men learned that city capturing brought with it
More power and cash; take for most recent data
Those Liberal Mexique chiefs who, with small wit,
Dance forth first couples in fair Fame's cotillion,
For buying up and killing Maximilian.

CV.

But Juan saved the Frenchman, and the credit
Is due him for his very noble action,
As all who saw the true account and read it
Admitted; but his fate was but a fraction
More cheerful than before, as I, who edit
This work, know well, for hunger's ravenous faction
Of demons threatened to attack and slaughter
The whole of this small party on the water.

CVI.

And hunger is of all the direst foe
That ever yet the human race assailed;
Its pains and pangs perhaps you do not know;
Before its power the stoutest hearts have quailed.
Old Egypt, as the ancient histories sh ow,
Grew quite submissive when the corn crop failed;
In my opinion Hades' deepest damning
And heaviest punishment consists of famine.

CVII.

Our three were hungry, but their chance for food
Seemed not to be particularly flattering,
While that of starving was most badly good;
They talked but little, for their teeth were chattering.
The Don displayed the greatest hardihood,
For tho' the water over him was spattering,
He pulled his shirt off with design to make
A little sail the spanking breeze to take.

CVIII.

No sooner had he done so, than the lady,
With dextrous movement which deserves all praise,
Fumbles about her clothes, and keeping "shady"
Behind her husband, now takes off and lays
At Juan's feet her crinoline and skirt; already
They have enough stuff for a sail, he says;
And soon 'tis hoisted, and they're half elate
To see the craft dash on at such a rate.

CIX.

From out his rough bed in the stormy sea
Uprose the sun, and shot his golden lance
Down where the ocean roared in mystery.
So merrily his myriad beams did dance,
That one might think he was a fiend, to be
Accessory to death, and yet not glance
More sternly on the treach'rous ocean, where
A thousand dead men's bones encrusted are.

CX.

The shipwrecked trio hailed the sun's uprising
With joy forever, for the chance seemed nearer
Of reaching land, and it is not surprising
That life, when danger threatens, seems much dearer
Than when it doesn't. I have been surmising
That many a man who says he doesn't fear a
Quick death would find his own opinions far
From truth had he been on the EVENING STAR.

CXI.

The time passed on till near the hour of noon,
When Juan, on the sharp look out, descried
Another of the ship's boats, and he soon
Brought his queer rigged arrangement alongside;
'Twas manned by sailors three, and grateful boon,
They found the others willing to divide
Their food, consisting (no great feast in York)
Of forty pounds of crackers and some pork.

CXII.

These sailors were a tawly crew
In this last boat, with thickly clustering hair
On arm and chest, with noses of that hue
That would have argued spirits had been there,
If spirits from the deep might give a clue
From out their misty regions of mid-air,
To lonely voice that on them would call
Where only waves and sky betokened all.

CXIII.

The Frenchman, who at first was much excited,
Had now grown calm, but in his dark grey eyes
That calmness spoke despair; he was affrighted,
Not for himself, but for his wife; she, wise
In all things, by her cheerful manner lighted
His troubled features somewhat; neither sighs
Nor groans escaped her, and she kept her place
With what appeared a quite unruffled face.

CXIV.

The sun, which at the first seemed cheerful bright,
Had grown so hot that Juan's luckless back
Was burnt, and covered o'er with blisters qu te.
He bore it bravely, though, and showed no lack
Of courage, but devoutly wished that night
Would come to cool his skin. The boundless track
Was all unknown to them on which they sailed,
And neither light nor darkness much availed.

CXV.

Don Juan's faith and hope were of the best,
His swelling muscles glittered in the sun,
His light skiff mounted every airy crest,
And disappeared when every crest was won,
Until the red sun, sinking in the West,
Threw back upon the ocean's gray and dun
One rosy tinge of either love or wrath,
Which swept across our traveler's luckless path.

CXVI.

But ere the Day-King sunk into the sea,
A wave that seemed to take a long last look,
With shining summit, white and flashing free,
Impatient of its strength, their frail boat shook,
And lifted it aloft, that he or she,
Whate'er you call old Sol, might take a look
At the poor craft which just then turned fair over—
Down sank the lady and her husband-lover.

CXVII.

But Juan loving life too well for this,
From salty waves his last embrace to take,
With no great hope, perhaps, of future bliss,
Resolved a desperate attempt to make
To save himself from the wild sea's abyss
That yawned before him, should he make or break
The satisfaction he would have of knowing
He did his best to save his own out-going.

CXVIII.

When one approaches death by drowning, I
Am told by those at least who ought to know,
That all one's past deeds of existence fly
Before the mental vision, if 'tis so
I am not certain that I'd choose to die
Within the water, for my faults would grow
To crimes, if mustered in one company,
Altho' from sin I'm tolerably free.

OUR PORTRAIT GALLERY.

G. W. H. GRIFFIN.

THIS popular minstrel composer and interlocutor was born in Gloucester, Mass., March 21st, 1828. When he was but six months old his parents removed to Boston, taking our hero with them. At 15 years of age he was placed in a lawyer's office, where he remained two years, after which he was apprenticed to the engineering business. He soon became a member of the Boston Glee Club, who were in the habit of giving concerts in the adjacent towns. When he had reached his twenty-first year he became manager of a minstrel party called "The Boston Harmonists." The party started from Palmyra, N. Y., where he made his first appearance in cork. After traveling a short time with this company he joined the "Grey Warblers." Billy and Lon Morris, E. W. Prescott and Dick Sliter were in this company. Leaving this party he joined at different times several companies until he finally settled down in this city with Bryants' Minstrels. In 1853 he became one of Wood's Minstrels, with whom he remained for a long time a great favorite with the New York public. In 1858 we find him with R. M. Hooley, traveling through the West with a good organization of "corklets." Returning to this city, he became a partner with R. Hooley and opened Nibio's Saloon with one of the best minstrel companies ever seen in this city. After this he appeared with various companies in and out of this city. He was a great favorite at Hooley's Opera House, Brooklyn, and at the same time was director of music at one of the principal churches in that city. Leaving Brooklyn, Mr. Griffin appeared at the Fifth Avenue Minstrel Opera House, under the management of T. Condron, as interlocutor. He soon after became interested in the management, and the company was known as Griffin & Christy's Minstrels. The season closing, Mr. Griffin looked around for another place of amusement, and at last, in conjunction with George Christy, leased Union Hall, corner of Broadway and Twentieth streets, this city, which they fitted up as a minstrel hall and opened on July 29th. Mr. Griffin has won considerable reputation as an author as well as performer. His musical compositions, many of which are very highly spoken of, have made their mark in public favor. Among his most popular compositions are "Lonely No More," "My Green wood Home," "Louie Lee," "Bird of the Wreck," "Not a Star from our Flag," "Sister, Thou art Dear to Me," "Pleasant Dreams of Long Ago," "Tell Me, Little Twinkling Star," "I am Lonely To-night," "Happy Days," "Cherish Love While You May," and many others. In addition to these, his sacred pieces for churches are equally as popular. Mr. Griffin is also author of many comic acts, and has also appeared on the stage as a burlesque actor, having played Henry Mortimer in "The Ghost," a few years ago, at a popular theatre in Boston. As a musical composer, interlocutor, general burlesque performer and burlesque writer, Mr. Griffin is a great favorite, and justly entitled to all the popularity he enjoys.

A BULLY ENCOUNTER.—Three or four citizens of Peekskill, N. Y., had a very narrow escape from a perilous situation a few days ago. They belonged to the sporting persuasion, and wished to know exactly what time could be made by a man sewed up in a sack, and to secure a basis of safe betting, they repaired to a distant field of a wealthy citizen, and just as they had got a young man sewed up in a sack they heard a rumbling noise in the distance. They took it for distant thunder, but looking westward, one of them saw dust and turf flying high in the air, as if lifted by a tempest; and in a moment more a mad bull, roaring and pawing the sod, came tearing down in the direction of the company of sports. One of the men, tall, well formed, athletic and spunky, seized a rail and went out to meet the adversary; another took to his heels and made the tallest time on record; another ascended the nearest tree, our informant says, feet foremost, and the poor fellow sewed up in the sack, partaking of the fears of his flying comrades, fell to the ground and rolled to the barway, but could not go further. But the bull, awed by the bold front and flashing eyes of the man of pluck, muscle and rail, ceased his frightful demonstrations and became as placid as a lamb, and the whole party, to their infinite joy, came off without a scratch.

THIS "PAPER DOES SAY."

"When cotillions are on the carpet,
The captain is sure to be thar."—Sol. Smith.

FROM OUR LONDON CORRESPONDENT.

London was quite turned out of doors this day a week or so, by the visit of the Sultan, and some 2,000 Belgian Volunteer Soldiery.

As for the Grand Turk, the aldermen and their wives went out of their wits for him, filled up the word NILE on Nelson's monument with plaster to prevent his "taking snuff" at it, borrowed plate on all sides to cram the hall, and make him fancy all that metal crockery was the Mayor's. But the mourning on struggling Crete sent tears here, and it rained all the while he stayed. His ambassador's wife died of heart disease at the ball in his honor, which the East Indians have to pay for, to save the royal purse.

As for the Belgians, a committee affected to attend to them, but they had not raised money enough, and so left the foreigners to their own devices. Meddling all through. Short rations at the feasts; nobody to talk to them; if charitable outsiders had not hastened to get drunk with them they would have had a sad old time.

I did think the Common Council of N. Y. could make more blunders at a Japanese ball than Zerah Colburn could count, but I yield to the English on this art: they are more bull-headed at receiving dis, and ex-tinguished foreigners than we ever will be.

Perhaps it don't matter. According to the nobles, who see the Guelphic absortion of money and the Reform Bill as the horns of a dilemma, who knows if the world will last three weeks longer? England once Americanized, and when "king opposes man deposes."

Junius said there were few excesses in which English gentlemen might not be permitted to indulge. Marquis Townshend (not old Jacob) and some baronets are amateuring at the Holborn Theatre. The professionals don't like it, of course. They talk savage of it. One little lady, owner of a nice, round girlish face, like Alice Haven's, with a pretty mouth (not large though she has, she says, had "to utter some awful broad things, sir, in my time," says the first lord of the dram. pers, having a stage direction to "look off into vacancy" in his part, contends he does right to gaze steadily at his friend Sir John!

A second slap at the fitted troupe, I gleaned eavesdroppingly, I fear, but Figaro declares "To listen is the best way to hear anything," and I listened.

It's only that (the lady affirmed) one of the esquires, going to "double," was bade to "dress sanzer." Whereupon, he went down beneath the stage and donned the garments there! Mere spite, you know. I daren't whisper it, or, as the Brewers say, there might begin "proceedings to Mash."

By the bye, our "harp of a thousand strings," and other religious jests, shock the English, you know. Truth to say, they crack just as bad ones, as our "greenbacks know not their Redeemer liveth," only—they don't print 'em! Here's one on that Peto, chairman of so many societies, when floundering amid their failures. He was directed to Isaiah for the wisaiahest counsel: "When thou criest, let thy companies deliver thee!" Nothing's sacred to an American, eh?

A new piece at the Princess'. I am prejudiced against it before I have seen it. It is a literary play, more words than action. It is "The Man o' Airlie," and Scotch as a Caledonian Club Day at Jones' Wood. The only professional criticism on it I have heard was "favorable." Says my informant, who had hoped to get an engagement at the house, but didn't: "Oh! such a nice piece—a splendid wait before the last act!" I managed to slip in between the Dexterous paces of her tongue, that weighty pieces were not much liked. "Oh, but I never meant that! There's such a long time taken to set the stature down that you can have a good sleep before you're called." Favorable, but perhaps she had better have kept quiet.

Madge Robertson has given a slight specimen of the way she can grapple Ophelia (Hamlet's, not Uncle Tom's). I have told you she was plain faced, mild eyed, and, save that she spoke very piteously the "owl was a baker's daughter," etc., and sang passably, it was a scarcely notable exhibition. Except Mrs. Hermann Vezin, Ada Clifton, the unalterable, might play Ophelia here, as she has for fifteen years among you, without the sight of a worthy rival.

"Lightning Drill" Austen has left the Holborn Amphitheatre, and zoologically delights the Cremorne habitants. Two clowns at the former resort do the "Dwarf enlarging into Giant" business, a lad on a man's shoulders, with false head, etc., very comically. The rest of the bill, shapeless features, except A. Bradbury bestriding a horse, with a running jump at a fast pace for the small ring. Rose Gerard leaps three single balloons fifteen rides around, and does not show too much exhaustion afterwards. It keeps her "trained low," though.

I don't think Barry Sullivan, when in the States, ever played Falstaff. He did so here, the other night, a fragment for a benefit, Gadshill and Tavern Scene, Henry IV, Part 1. His make-up was excellent, except for being too bulky with padding, in my opinion. He played well, of course, and spoke well, but it was impossible for his voice to be made unctious enough for the fat rogue. It almost converted me to the belief that only a real corpulent man can play it naturally.

It's queer, when you ask a Londoner to show you some pretty women, he takes you to see the foreign beauties in the audience at the French plays. Rachel's brother, Felix, who Raphael'd the N. Y. editors so keenly, manages the troupe, but the members are nothing extra—not better than Jiugnet's ancient combinations. The lark is to watch the English solitaire-pinites, pretending they understand the Parisian hits in the "Fast Family." They posted their French on the Belgians, who, whenever they asked for bread, were given beer.

"Blackeyed Susan," burlesque, has run the New Royalty for 200 nights. Miss Collinson, who plays William, is tall and rather slight, and on it being complimentarily observed to her that she ought to be promoted from the common sailor's berth, she is "said to have said": "As the biscuit bakers say, make a 'thin captain' of me, 'um?" Biscuit is English for cracker, you know, so that a Boston urchin, whose father took him to Cremorne on the 4th, received a devilled biscuit when he asked for "fire-crackers." Reliable.

What amusement it is when you are in the country, stopping with a friend, to have him drag you about all day long to view his hen yard, his farm yard, his dairy, his fishing boat, his guns, his work loft, and ——, about seven, by dusk, precisely, as you hanker to hear the big armed girl (who nearly knocked you through the kitchen door with a mild tap for essaying the Kissengen treatment) blow that horn for tea, your guide suddenly grabs you again, and starts you off across the Dekem's huckleberry pastur' for to see that black mar' o' his, bred straight down from Queen Bess Arabian stock.

"Jess so," a friend (keep the "s" in this time) caught me coming out of the St. James', about to todole to my more or less vir (gin leaf) chew-ous couch. And says he: "It's just time for the ballet to be on at the Alhambra—come see my girl!"

The volume of emphasis he brought out that my GIRL in would make the fortune of a publisher these days.

I was a resistant first off, but after a call at a house (judging from the probable effects of its liquor more than from its female barmen of ill-fame) I coincided with him.

The Alhambra will hold 5,000 gay girls and moral men; its capacity has rarely been tested with other contents. A big place and (except Covent Garden) the brightest hall in London, more in the Nicolo's illuminated style.

It's a bad audience that accumulates, as regards what progresses on the stage, as the sisters in the congregation come only as personifications of prayers for the brethern. Meaning big., they only stroll in to rake some devoted youth out of doors with them. My friend an I I worked round for a table, and while he exercised the nippers from his "Quint" to shorten his cigar at the right end (I believe his education has reached that bourne), I studied the people.

Black hat and white plume over striped dress (toe long for wearer), holding up her hand with three fingers up, on the right side of hall; on left side, straw hat and yellow feather over dark blue dress (a riding habit reconstructed), holding up two fingers. Black hat triumphant, straw pouty. Cause: the fingers implied how many times each had swooped into the hall and soared out with a doomcry. Black hat, so far, in the majority of one. I shuddered as straw came over in my direction.

Smoking and drinking going on to tunes like "Tramp, Tramp," which set you right back in Columbia again. There's one key in the English and American heart that gives forth the same note when touched.

Strong and good orchestra play up the curtain. Ice cavern and mondescripts who turn over head and heels like cog-gnomen. Then ballet, thirty or so, it was fifty, first-rates, too, some time since, and the manager deserved all credit for giving the ballet girls work all the year round. They had almost grown used to hard living except when the Columbinations of pantomimes came round. Indeed, some of the dancers were nicely built and were not above learning a few steps after having been taught to turn their toes out. But at this moment, the corps is very poor. Elderly young girls of no particular shape, guileless of face and style. There were about five who were young enough to have space to learn, and had substance, cast in the proper mould, enough to promise fair results in a year of training.

However, my friend's eyes began to get accustomed to an opera glass focus, and his cigar went out

"That's her!" said he in Mooney's English.

"Who," said I, thinking a stray princess might have taken the wrong turning to her palace; "Where?"

"My girl," gasping it out, "in the white, light hair, sparkles in her hair, pink ribbons—"

"The slim one with the good leg?" said I—and he gave me an awful look.

"No!"

"Then that good one with the shin l——"

"Yes!"

She was simply one of that variety of English girls who puzzle you. They're good-looking, wear a pleasing expression, but have small eyes (pig-eyes they call them same in Connaught), and eyebrows so light that they don't show on the face. Small eyes, I believe, betoken jealousy, but these English thus deficient in development of pupil, ain't jealous, and that bends that rule up the back. They'll let you wear your coat sleeves out seeing a dozen other girls home, and won't go off their appetites not a square inch. Pretty soon, in her circling (she flung her limbs out freely but rather loosely at the hips,) she espied my friend, and as her glance comprised me, I—I—I trembled at the idea of his imprudence at showing her a formidable old man like me, a once runner with "Red Rover that no machine could tip over."

He thought it was all for him, that look, and blushed in patches (as Englishmen do) from side-whisker to side-whisker.

"Ugh! what do you—"

"Think of her? Well, with a year's hard practice, she'll do for the front rank in the Black Crook of 1868. But—do you believe in omens?"

"No, nor in owomens either!"

"Because, apropo de bottes, she's a bad habit there—she strikes too hard on the after-part of her sandals—and 'wear at the heel, spend a good deal.'"

Perhaps this old saw would have cut him, but just then his idol "formed picture," and threw herself back, one leg bent and out and t'other on the kneel-longwise behind, head sidewise, eyes looking at him and a twitch of the left hand, in the "This the way to Eleventh street?" style, to display the ring he had given her. It takes women, and girls particularly, and ballet girls especially, to "ring in" the sex with little side shows of this nature.

My friend was riveted to his chair as a boiler-plate; and rising to my feet, I beckoned Straw Hat to me and collapsingly whispered:

"Louie, put up your whole hand, I've the Jack to play." To do her justice, she dealt gently with

SHORT BUT DECISIVE FIGHT

BETWEEN

PATSEY EVANS, OF RONDOUT, AND TOM MCGURRAN, OF N. Y.

EVANS WINS IN 13 ROUNDS, 21 MINUTES.

The momentous question of which of those two formidable looking aspirants for fistic renown, Patsey Evans, the "Rondout Giant," or Tom McGurran, of Ward 18, could deliver the hardest blows and stand the most punishment with the naked fist, was definitely settled on the quiet at a sly little nook near the moral village of Flushing, L. I., late in the afternoon of the 7th inst., when an emphatic verdict was pronounced in favor of the Rondouter, who gave his stalwart opponent more than he wanted in the space of about twenty one minutes by the chronometer, fighting thirteen not very desperate rounds. Both men are novices in the art mauly, neither having put up his digits in the squared circle, although while the infant from Rondout was circulating around town last winter, red hot for some one to tread on the tail of his raglan, a little scrapping match was gotten up by several prominent sports between him and Luke Murphy, just for the fun it would make and to see what Patsey could do. This little affair was quietly brought off at a well known sporting house up town, and terminated in a draw. It served to demonstrate the fact that although Evans wouldn't flinch from punishment, but stand right up to the rack and take his gruel like a major, he was sadly deficient in science and ring tactics generally.

Shortly after this Patsey returned to the rural districts and the bosom of his family—if he's got any—and the places which once knew him in Gotham knew him no more until about the middle of last month, when, having caught the fever pugilistic which has been raging here some time, he invaded the metropolis once more in search of some one who wanted to test his powers, fistically considered. The object of his visit coming to the knowledge of Charley Diamond, of 104 Spring street, he, with an eye to sport as well as business, took Patsey under his fostering care, and after looking about awhile found a customer in the person of a powerfully built young fellow from the Eighteenth Ward, named Tom McGurran, and a match was arranged in the wee sma' hours of Wednesday morning, 17th ult., Owney Geoghegan, the Third avenue boniface, depositing the necessary sugar on behalf of the East-sider, whom he styled his Novice, and Diamond putting up for his protege. Both men went into active training at once, Evans under the eye of Butt Riley, and McGurran having the services of an experienced up-town rounder, and they worked like Trojans are reputed to have done in days of yore to get rid of all superfluous flesh and reduce their avoirdupois to a proper limit. Patsey stands full 6ft. 3 in. minus his patent leathers, is 25 years of age, and on the day of battle weighed about 190 lbs., according to Fairbanks. McGurran reaches an altitude of 6ft. 2in., is about twenty years old, and deposited on the scales some 208lbs of good solid bone and muscle. Although we have had a surfeit of unimportant matches of late between unknowns for "stakes small or none at all," this affair gave rise to more excitement among the boys than all these minor affairs put together, partly owing to the crowd at the back of the respective parties, and the heavy sports whose names were mentioned in connection with them, but more particularly because of the size of the principals, which gave promise of a mill well worth a journey to see.

The day originally fixed for the event to take place was Wednesday, Aug. 7, and the tickets issued some days prior, entitling the holder to a passage on the steamer George Washington, chartered for a "moonlight excursion to the Cholera Banks," went off like hot muffins at Leggett's on a cold morning, at five dollars apiece. The boat was advertised to leave the foot of Barrow street, North river, at 11½ P. M., Tuesday, and thither we repaired, looking in at Charley Diamond's, Alex. Mason's, Johnny Hassett's, and other noted sporting houses on the way, where we found the "coves wot love a mill" gathered in force, discussing the merits of the men and getting themselves fixed to wage war successfully against Morpheus and "them blawsted muskeeters" during the trip. On arriving at the designated rendezvous we found the boat non est—the why and wherefore of the change being explained by the presence of a knot of peelers on the corner, eyeing the passers suspiciously, a sight which boded ill and made some of the boys feel uneasy. We finally found the steamer moored at the Leroy street dock, and when we arrived, shortly after 11 o'clock, about two hundred had assembled on board, including Joe Coburn, Rockey Moore, Charley Diamond, Bill Ryall, Peter Morris, Tom Riley, Mike Costello, Jimmy Carney, Jimmy Hanly, Billy Kelly, in fact nearly all the leading sports of the metropolis were on hand. Just before the boat got ready to start, a detachment of cops, under command of Capt. Dickerson and Sergt. McGrath, made their unwelcome advent on the scene, and after searching the boat without avail for the principals, they made preparations to prevent the vessel leaving. Upon the Captain threatening to make them suffer in case they suspected him to loss by persisting in this resolve, Dickerson ordered his men off the boat, and casting off the lines we steamed up the river. At 34th street dock Geoheghan and his man were expected to come on board, but although a crowd were in waiting, a strong police force on the dock made it prudent to give it a wide berth, and on we went to Weehawken. Here we lay at anchor from half past one until four A. M., waiting for McGurran to make his appearance—Patsy came on board shortly after two o'clock—when thinking that Owney and his man had been nabbed or given up all idea of fighting, the boat was put about, and the excursionists, sleepy and out of sorts generally, landed at 22d and Leroy street docks.

The general impression seemed to be that Geogheghan didn't fancy the crowd on the other side, and the mill was therefore voted "off." Determined, however, to bring matters to a climax as speedily as possible, Charley sent a messenger in search of Owney, whom he found hadn't been pulled, and preparations were made for a move in another direction. Late in the afternoon the principals and those in the secret, numbering not over twenty-five in all, left the city by different routes, crossing the raging East River, coming to a halt at Flushing, L. I., near which place a nice spot of ground was picked out, a ring formed, the toilettes of the giants quickly arranged, and they stood up for the struggle, McGurran being acquired by Owney Geogheghan and Tom Pratt, while Butt Riley and Charley Diamond performed the same service for the Rondout hero, Joe Coburn acting as referee.

THE FIGHT.

Round 1. The men were in fair condition, and presented a very muscular appearance, which elicited the admiration of those at the ring side as they threw themselves into attitude. There was little grace apparent in the position and actions of either, but their tremendous size gave promise of a rattling fight. Both were evidently eager for the tussle, and quickly got to work, the Rondout representative taking the initiative by sending in his right with terrific force on Mac's facial promontory, distilling the cochineal copiously and confusing him, who essayed several times, but was out of all distance, Patsey repeating his visitations with both hands on the cocoanut, and ultimately winding up the round by a smasher on the neck, which sent Thomas down instanter. First blood and first knock down claimed and allowed for Evans.

2. Scarcely had they toed the mark ere Patsey, elated with his success in the opening round, resumed hostilities by extending his right, which found a landing place on Tom's left eye, following it up with the left on the nasal organ, turning on the tap again, Tom retaliating with a little one on the jaw and a rib-bender with his auctioneer. A clinch, and after severe fibbing Mac was thrown.

3. Getting warmed to their work they commenced operations without any fiddling, both investing simultaneously, Patsey getting home on the left cheek, cutting an ugly gash, from which the ruby spirted, and napping it severely on the body. A clinch followed, and after a prolonged struggle Mac was twisted off his feet and thrown, with Patsey on him heavily.

4 and 5. Mac's phisieg had underwent a wonderful change for the worse thus early, being puffed out of all shape, and his bad eye rapidly going up, while Patsey was unscathed, save several flushed spots on the ribs. By the advice of his seconds, which tallied with his own inclinations, the Giant forced matters, visiting the sore spot on the cheek, and sending home sledge-hammer blows with right and left almost without a return, each round terminating by Mac being knocked off his pedals, to the supreme disgust of his friends and the corresponding delight of Patsey's adherents.

6 to 8. The punishment which Mac had received told its tale, his features looking anything but Grecian-like in cast, and his pins giving evidence of weakness, while Evans was as strong as ever, and skipped about as spry as a kitten. Patsey had things all his own way, hitting whenever and wherever he pleased, and escaping with little or no retaliatory punishment, Mac striking wildly, his calculating powers having apparently been knocked into a cocked hat by the onslaughts of Patsey. Mac down each time.

9 to 12. These rounds were very similar, Evans having matters all his own way, and knocking his fast failing opponent about like a shuttlecock. McGurran kept out of harm's way all he could, but those long arms and ponderous fists would find him out, and he was obliged to take it with as good grace as possible, going down in the last two rounds without a blow.

13 and last. Mac staggered to the scratch, but Evans met him with one, two on the left eye and neck, the latter sending him down all of a heap, and when time was called for the fourteenth bout Mac was found insensible, and the sponge was chucked up in token of Evans' victory.

Thus ended the struggle of the giants, which didn't by any means come up to the expectations of those interested, all of whom expected to witness a prolonged and desperate contest. It has increased the confidence of Evans' backers to a considerable extent, and as Patsey is ready for another go any time, he may ere long have a foeman more worthy of his muscle than his late opponent, who, though willing enough, has neither the skill nor enduring powers to back it up.

BOYS IN BLUE SETTLE ACCOUNTS.

Dick Lawless and Mickey Baldauf, a couple of herculean framed specimens of the genus homo, now doing duty for their adopted country at Fort Foote, in Maryland, My Maryland, amused their comrades and relieved the irksome monotony of barrack life by a nice little game of fisticuffs, ere the dew had disappeared from the blades of grass, and other rural things that will "stick to wearin' of the green," spite of opposition, on the morning of the 4th day of the eighth month. Lawless stands 6 feet half an inch in his "guveys," and weighs in the neighborhood of 185lbs., while his antagonist reaches an altitude of 6ft 3in., and in avoirdupois is a few ounces heavier than Dick. The former baileth from Hold Hingland, and the latter from Australia, where, according to their own telling, they have tested their powers of endurance in similar fashion a number of times previously, although Fistiana fails to record the encounters. The present match grew out of a dispute, and $250 in the paper of the republic was planked on the issue by the backers of each man. At half past four o'clock on the morning named, the men shook hands, chassed up to the mark, and threw themselves into position for

THE FIGHT.

Round 1. Although neither man had trained an hour, yet they looked in fair condition, probably owing to the fact that they take plenty of exercise daily. After a moment or two passed in sparring for an opening, Dick saw a chance and immediately took advantage thereof, getting in a ripper on the mouth, and receiving on the left eye a terrific hit, sending him to terra firma in a horizontal posish, like a flash. First knock down for Mickey the Grecian.

2. The men advanced with alacrity, and both being bent on forcing matters, regardless of punishment, delivered blows fast and thick, science being discarded and muscle and endurance alone relied on to pull it off. After desperate fighting, principally at close quarters, during which each man was badly punished and covered with fast flowing blood, they clinched, and Lawless was thrown. First blood claimed for both, but allowed to neither.

3. The hard fighting in the previous round told its tale in the appearance of the men, their facial appendages being knocked out of all contour, slashed and swollen frightfully. They went to work quickly, and after exchanging several pile drivers on the frontispiece they clinched, and after a long and severe struggle Lawless again embraced mother earth, Nigger (Mick's sobriquet) falling heavily across his neck.

4 to 10. These rounds were similar, marked by downright hard fighting, and terminating each time by Dick going down, with Mickey on top.

11. They fought shy of each other for some time, sparring for wind. Finally they got together, when Dick tried his left but was out of distance. Again he essayed to land with his left, but ere it reached its destination he ran against Mickey's fist with such violence that he rebounded several feet outside the ring, and when time was called he was insensible and the battle was declared in Baldauf's favor. Our correspondent, Tom S., says Lawless' jaw was broken. We are promised particulars of another little mill now on the carpet among the boys with the red trimmings. Go it!

JOHNNY DWYER'S NIGHT.—The Shakespeare Rooms, in this city, were well filled, but with a pretty rough audience, on the 7th inst., gathered on the strength of the attractions offered by Johnny Dwyer, of Brooklyn, as well as to keep this young fellow along. The house was better than anybody dreamed it would be, and the boxing generally of a very exciting description. The Fourth Ward turned out very strong. Those who particularly distinguished themselves were Young Edward and Ed Tuohey, the young 'un getting around the white-headed youth very actively and sparring off well. Teddy McAuliffe and Johnny Grady had another good bout, but the set-to of the evening was a regular glove fight between Collyer and Kelly, which we regret missing being a looker-on at. Those who did see it, describe the whole affair as a pitched battle with gloves, the factions using their lungs for both, in the hopes that one or both would lose their temper and pitch in in earnest. Five hot rounds are said to have been contested, both fighting like tigers till one or the other was down, Sam being thrown once and Billy the remainder. Mike Noonan and Ed Lowery had a thugging match, and the others who put up their fins were Young Carr and Young Laird, Glasgow and a friend, Handy and Young Cannon, while Mick Costello and Johnny Dwyer closed the entertainment in a friendly exchange of blows. During the evening, Tovee introduced Messrs. Ryall, Allen and Morris, but owing to their joint affair coming off only a few days afterwards, of course they did not spar, reserving that for their own benefit. The Shakespeare Rooms used to be all the rage for sparring exhibitions, and whereas a few weeks ago not a place could be found in the city, there are now half a dozen parties anxious to let out halls for that purpose.

IRVINGTON vs. ATLANTIC.

THE CHAMPIONS AGAIN DEFEATED.

An exciting game was the result of the meeting between the champion Atlantics and the noted Irvington club, at Irvington, N. J., on Monday, Aug. 5. The Atlantics having met with such a disastrous defeat at Morrisania, the result of this game seemed a foregone conclusion; but the champions made a gallant fight of it. When they made a bold push for the lead on the eighth innings and scored 11 runs, it seemed as though they would prove winners. Five times did the lead change hands, and until the last man was put out, it was anybody's game. The crowd was very large, and 5,000 people must have been present. The Irvingtons did some capital batting, and their field was well kept. The improvement in the Atlantics' batting over the Union game was quite marked, but their fielding was about the same. The absence of Start, their reliable first baseman, caused a break in the nine which it was not easy to repair. Charley Smith took his place, and played creditably; but old "south paw" would have inspired confidence by his presence, and as the game was won by only two points, who can tell what difference his presence would have made?

The game opened with a decided advantage for the Irvingtons. At the end of the third innings the Atlantics put a different face on the matter, and the totals stood 12 to 8 in their favor. This they increased, and on the conclusion of the fourth it stood 15 to 10. Of course the friends of the Atlantics barely expected this, and it made them uproarious. They offered all sorts of bets, with few takers. By a fine rally in the next three innings the Irvingtons added 18 to their score, and fielded so sharply that their opponents made only singles in the same time, leaving the score 28 to 18, with the Jersey boys in the van. All hope seemed to have deserted the champions, and their partizans, who but a moment before were jubilant, now cried small. The eighth innings was commenced by the Irvingtons drawing a blank. The first two of the Atlantics who went to the bat were easily disposed of, and everybody expected that a "goose egg" would result. Nothing of the kind. Although everything was against them, they made a final effort. Run after run was obtained. The poorest batters seemed to be doing the best of the lot. The hits were long, clean and high. "All hands round" was the cry, and it was all hands round with a vengeance. "All hands round" the reporters' table were wild with excitement. Those who had bet their money on the Jerseymen looked blue. The other chaps looked as though they had "struck ile." For a time the confusion was extreme. Small fights were improvised by the more heated of the partizans, but the police took care of these gay and festive cusses, and those who were trying to keep a record of the game were more at ease. During all these side shows the players were not idle. The Atlantics kept on making runs, and did not stop till they had made the large number of 11. This was a horse of another color, and something those Jersey chaps did not bargain for. A sicker looking crowd is seldom seen, and they would have sold out mighty cheap. Not so the players. The Irvington nine took things as coolly as though it was an every day occurrence. There was no fear in them. They went to work in the ninth innings like men who knew they had a hard task before them, but with a determination to do or die. How well they did let the record speak. Before their last man was put out in the ninth innings six runs were put to their credit, leaving the Atlantics five to get to tie and six to win. But it was not on the cards. Fate, like a genius of evil, was against them. But they died hard. Three runs were scored, and two men were on bases, when Mills hit a beauty to centre field. It went flying through the air like a messenger of death. It proved to be such almost in reality. It was at least death to the hopes of the Atlantics and their friends. Amidst the execrations of some and the yells of delight of others, H Campbell squared himself for the catch. It seemed an age to the expectant crowd while the one object of interest to so many was sailing through the air, for, singular enough, this globe-like object, which had been knocked about so much all day, was to decide the fate of those who had bet their money on the game. But everything has an end, and the flight of this ball finally ended in the hands of the fielder. Amid the most deafening shouts from the winners and curses from the losers, the field was invaded by the crowd. They crowded round the conquerors, and congratulated them upon their great victory. The Atlantics were not neglected. They had the sympathy of the impartial portion of the spectators. They deserved success if they did not receive it. After their spirt for the lead in the eighth innings, the sympathetic chord in the American heart, which is so easily touched by a fine display of skill, whether it be on the turf or on the water, or in any other manly sport, evinced itself in a spontaneous outburst of enthusiastic cheers. All, except the most violent partizans gave vent to their feelings. Of the individual play in this game there is a great deal to praise. With the exception of Crane, all the Atlantics batted like heroes. It seemed like "old times, Rocks," and carried us back in memory to the time when they always batted well. Of the fielding we cannot speak in high terms. Ferguson at third, Smith at first, fly balls in good style. The pitcher of the F.'s is a strong player, and with equally good support, especially behind the bat, the score would have been different. The clubs were attired in their new uniforms—made of grey material, trimmed with blue, and very handsome. We give the score:—

JEFFERSON vs. EMPIRE.

On the 1st inst. these Washington, D. C., clubs, indulged in a friendly contest. The game commenced under very unfavorable circumstances for the Jeffs, owing to the absence of two of their regular nine. Notwithstanding this, however, they succeeded in winning by one run, the credit of which is due to Doyle, who came just in the nick of time on the seventh innings. The play of Shields, as catcher, on the part of the Jeffs, and Beach at 2d base of the Empires, was admirable. In batting, Joyce, of the J's, and Beach, of the E's, took the lead, though "Skillett" also made his mark. The score:—

JEROME PARK vs. PUTNAM.

On the morning of the 1st inst., the Putnam Club, of Troy, N. Y., visited this city for the purpose of playing a match with the Jerome Park Club, and sustained defeat by a count of 33 to 27. The fielding of the P's was noteworthy, that of their short stop being brilliant in stopping hot ground balls. Messrs. Devlin, White, Coffey and G. Tracey also distinguished themselves. BALL PLAY IN THE BAY STATE.—The Clipper Club, of Lowell, and Independent, of Leominster, Mass., played a match for the championship of the fifth district, on the 26th ult. The Clips won by a score of 52 to 40.....The Red Foot, of Chelsea, and Hopeful, of Charlestown, had a friendly scrimmage on the 27th ult., on the grounds of the former, the H.'s winning by a score of 36 to 15.....The Brookline and Flyaways played a game on the 27th ult., which the Brookline Club lost by a score of 30 to 14, at the expiration of seven innings.....A match took place between the Electric and Everett Clubs, of Brighton, on the 27th ult., which, after an exciting contest, was won by the Electric by a score of 21 to 17..... The Winthrops, of Boston, played their third match for the championship of the fourth district, on the 27th ult., with the Chemung Club, of Stoughton, on the grounds of the Fleetfoot's, of South Braintree, and won by a score of 47 to 35.

MARRIED VS SINGLE.—A match between nine married and nine single men of the Athletic Club, of Philadelphia, was played in that city on the 31st ult., the married chaps raking the singles fore and aft, and defeating them by a score of 28 to 11. We understand that some of the single players—impressed with the great influence which matrimony exerts in behalf of all outdoor as well as indoor recreations—have determined to shun the error of their single ways, and join the solid phalanx of the married circle. "It is never too late to mend."

THE MAINE TOURNAMENT.—The closing game of the Base Ball Tournament for the silver ball and state championship, was played on the afternoon of the 5th inst, between the Eon club, of Portland, Me., and the Cushnoc club, of Augusta. The Eons won the emblem of championship by a score of 48 to 30, and the ball was presented to them on the grounds at the conclusion of the game. About five thousand people were present.....Hall, of the Eons, received the gold medal as the best general player; Ring, of the Bowdoins, the gold mounted field glass, for the best outfielder; Keazer, of the Eons, the prize bat, for the best score in the closing game; and the Athletics, of Portland, the silver service for the best fielding nine.

CHAMPIONSHIP OF MINNESOTA.—It is in contemplation to hold a tournament at St. Paul, Minnesota, in September next, at which will be determined the championship of the State.—Quite a number of fine players have already signified their readiness to compete, and several players from adjacent States have promised to attend and give exhibitions of their skill; so that fine sport may be predicted. There are to be several valuable prizes, a silver cue, just finished by Phelan & Collender, of this city, leading off.

MOUNTAIN VS. STAR.—A return game was played between the above clubs at Altoona, Pa., the paradise of travelers, on the Pennsylvania Central road, July 31st, the Stars winning by a tally of 55 to 44. In the previous game played on the 27th ult., the Mountains won by a score of 49 to 39. In the last game we understand the M.'s tried to run in a cold nail on their opponents, but the latter were too shrewd for such sharp practice.

NATIONAL VS. KANGAROO.—Waynesboro', in the Keystone State, was the scene of a game played on the 2d inst., between the Nationals, of that place, and the Kangaroo Club, of Greencastle. The Kangaroo jumped away from their antagonists from the start, and finally won by a count of 80 to 37.

JOURNALISTS VS. TYPOS.—About five thousand persons gathered on the Excelsior grounds, Chicago, Ill., on the 7th inst., to witness the playing of a match between the writers for the press and the printers of that city. The journalists won by a score of 90 to 80.

A JUNIOR GAME.—On the 31st ult, the first game of a home and home match was decided at Redwing, Minn., between the Crescent Club, of that place, and the Minneapolis, of town bearing same name. The C.'s won, by a count of 34 to 27.

HOPE VS. KILLBUCK.—The former beat the latter by a tally of 92 to 70 at Wooster, O., on the 7th inst.

ARCTIC VS. ARCHELLS.—These clubs had a scrimmage at Indianapolis, Ind., on the 7th inst, the Arctics winnings by a tally of 52 to 49.

STARLIGHT VS. ALERT.—Rochester, N. Y., was the locale of a match between the above clubs on the 7th inst. The S's won by a score of 30 to 12.

NOVA SCOTIA VS. NEW BRUNSWICK.—A cricket match was played between elevens of the garrisons of the above provinces at Halifax, N. S., on July 23d and 23d, which the Blue Noses won by totals of 55 and 191, against 52 and 61. The battrug was good but the fielding and bowling loose, judging from the large number of extras, no less than 54 byes, wides, etc., being added to the Nova Scotians' score, and 28 to that of the New Brunswickers'.

BOSTON vs. AMATEUR.

The return match between the Amateur Club, of Chelsea, Mass., and the second eleven of the Boston Club, was decided on the grounds of the latter at East Cambridge on Aug. 5th. In the first match, played June 29th, Boston won, but this time the Amateurs turned the tables on their opponents, beating them by eight runs. Below is the score:—

CRICKET IN ENGLAND.—The cricket season in England is just now at its zenith, and the most important matches are being played. On July 22d and 23d, the match between the gentlemen of the North and South was played at Middlesex, which the South won by eight wickets.....Sussex defeated Surry on July 22d and 23d, at Brighton, by ten wickets. Sussex needed 98 runs to win in their second innings, which Smith and Payne scored without the loss of a wicket, against such bowlers as Griffith, Mortlock, Humphrey, Street, Sewell and Stephenson, which shows that their willow wielding must have been of the very best description; also, that Sussex is resuming its old position as a leading county.

THE BANKERS' AND MERCHANTS'
SECOND
GRAND PRESENTATION ENTERTAINMENT
WILL POSITIVELY TAKE PLACE
SATURDAY, AUGUST 24, 1867,
AT IRVING HALL, NEW YORK.

This Grand Distribution of Prizes will be Conducted on the Mutual Benefit Principle.

A Pro Rata Distribution of Profits to Ticket Holders.

CAPITAL - - - - $1,287,148

TICKETS ONE DOLLAR EACH,

And Limited to One Million Two Hundred and Eighty-seven Thousand One Hundred and Forty-Eight.

The Fairest and Most Impartial Plan of Presentation yet offered to the Public.

A PRIZE WITH EVERY TICKET.

PROSPECTUS:

A number of the leading Bankers and Merchants of New York, in consideration of the great success which has attended many of the Charitable Presentation Entertainments of the day, have organized themselves into a company, with the view of inaugurating an enterprise which, while it shall return them a fair profit, shall offer greater advantages to ticket purchasers than any yet presented; and which, being conducted upon a perfectly legitimate business basis, shall be free from those objectionable features which have characterized many of these enterprises.

To this end, they have consigned the sale of tickets and the registering of the same to Clark, Webster & Co., Bankers and Managers, No. 62 Broadway, New York, who will keep the records in their custody until the day of the Grand Presentation Entertainment, when they will be handed over to a committee selected by the audience to make an impartial distribution of prizes.

A reference to the number of prizes and the general plan of distribution, given below, will convince even the most skeptical of the great advantages which will accrue to all who participate in the enterprise; and the Commercial and Financial standing of the Company, and the Managers and Bankers thereof, will, they hope, prove a sufficient guaranty of the fairness and impartiality with which everything in connection with the scheme will be conducted, and that the interests of ticket holders will be most strictly watched over and guarded. In fact, it is the desire of the managers to conduct every transaction for the mutual benefit of whoever shall purchase a ticket, and scrupulously to avoid any and everything which could in the slightest degree diminish the profits which are likely to accrue to all who invest.

City Summary.

MONDAY, Aug. 12, '67.

IT WAS an old salt—if our recollection is not faulty—who originated the popular expression, "water, water, everywhere, but not a drop to drink;" referring, evidently, to a stroll through the streets of New York, after 12 at night, during a heavy shower. We have had a quantum suff. of water since our last; yes, water comes as regularly now as our daily bread. We are saturated one moment—then sun dried, for sundry reasons, as a comic clown once remarked; and ere the close of night we undergo a parboiling, as the brewer's daughter said of her father when she observed him floundering in a vat of his own hot beer. But all things have an end—the flood in old Mr. Noah's time subsided after forty days and forty nights, having run itself dry; the Surratt trial terminated in sixty days; the new Court House is expected to come to an end some day; and our showers will dry up all in good time. "Water is a werry good thing in itself, when taken in small doses," says a professional bummer, "but it haint no bisness with whiskey." People afflicted with hydrophobia have a great dread of water: so have opponents of the Excise Law; their sufferings must have been very acute during the recent rainy season; others there be who abominate the aqueous stuff as they would a dose of "alloways," as old timers used to call aloes. Very prettily has the poet put in verse the appeal of a lovely daughter to her cruel mother for permission to go into bathe at Cape May:

"Mother, may I go in to swim?"
"Yes, my dearest daughter.
Hang your clothes on a hickory limb,
But don't you go near the water."

.....Playwrights are growing in favor; in addition to having copy rights granted them—so called because of the plays being copied from the French, etc.,—patents are now being applied for, and, in some cases, with success. Dramatists found their claims on the fact that their sensational plays contain many new mechanical effects. The gentlemen who dramatised Miss Braddon's story of "Nobody's Daughter,"—which made a hit at the New York Theatre—have applied for a patent for their handiwork, because, we presume, their play is a novel invention.....'Excursions by water" are now all the go—you needn't leave the city to enjoy them—people float about as cosily as though they were going to Paris on a raft, and these outdoor excursions serve to interfere with indoor diversions. "Our Jim" started out on one the other day—a private affair, so he'd nothing to pay; he sailed most pleasantly down the Bay, and if it weren't bully he wouldn't say; he sailed past the Hook, as he is a sinner, and then 'twas the song called all hands to dinner. They had in their cost nine ...ave him to do but to pour out another, which other ...id two; but few judge from small doses; you plainly may see ...eems tried another; this one it was three; he seemed not to ..., but thought with one more he'd be able to judge better, ...imbibed number four; he smacked his mouth o'er it, as ...re alive, and "reserved his decision" till he'd settled ...ive. He then said 'twas tip top, and on that same ...re, he was induced to try just a few glasses more; ...hich he did, and to make matters short, he discovered by ...is time that he was back in New York. He came ...the office to attend to his business, but couldn't succeed, he ...d such a dizziness. He then thought he'd do all the plays by ... way, and the first place he fetched up at was Barney Wil...ms' Broadway, but he couldn't see why, though no doubt to ...rance, they'd taken a cue from the "double-song dance;" and ... two Billy Florences instead of but one, and each single part ...o actors was done; 'twas odd that both actors were always ..., though this very strange thing no one else seemed to strike. ..." next started upward to take a fond look at that wonderful ... which we call the "Black Crook." How many legs there ..., to what amount, like ancient Robert Ridley, he "couldn't ...nt." Bonianti, she had four, "Jim" took his oath; and with ...ailt 'twas the same, four legs—in fact, both of these were ... prototypes of all the rest; and, funny, too, they looked—to ... the best—"Jim" insists, since from truth he ne'er shrunk, ...t every gal on the stage was, well, drunk. There was one ...ng happened at Niblo's, unto him—every one acted as if well ...ey know him; some sharply looked at him, and said ...hat a shame!" But Jim said very loud he cared not a dam-e. ...e left the Black Crookists, the Museum to visit, and did, but ...s notes are all mixed like "What Is It?" They read something ...ke this—perhaps they are true—Mrs. Gen. Tom Thumb's got a little ...by blue. The skeleton man was to be Harlequin, and the fat ...oman, she was to be Columbine; Jim thinks they enacted their ...parts with great zeal, and the music was furnished by Ned, the ...learned seal. He left, and towards the New York did roam, before ...he essayed to make tracks for his home; but owing to a moder...ate supply of cold water, "Jim" says he saw nothin' of "No...y's Daughter." The man who escorted him home, Jim ne'er ...ew, tut he thinks he's the father of little boy blue.....From ...e many classical quotations that appear in our criticisms from ...me to time, the reader knows full well that we are a master of ...nguages, a thorough linguist in every sense of the word. We ...ow no man to stand over us in the way of talk, and ...ake no one's dust on the great railroad of languages, though ...e cannot make a living by it, pure and simple. We had ...a jolly good laugh, the other day, over the discomfiture ...of a home-brewed critic for one of the learned daily ...papers. This learned critic, as you have been told, came to sell ...us a "story of the heart," a sort of history of a gay gambulier. ...Not knowing the hefty character of the man he had to deal with, ...he had previously assured us that he was master of all the ...languages, etc., and that he would sooner talk Latin than eat. ..."Hello!" said we, looking up, as he entered, "where did you ...come from—ab extra ?" "No," said he, "I don't want an extra ...just now." "You mistake us—we asked, in Latin, if you came ...from without." "Oh, yes," responded he, "without a cent." ..."Without assent," repeated we, with an innocent smile. ..."Where's the man that runs the literary department ?" interro...gated he. "Ecce homo," was our quiet rejoinder. "How can I ...know ?" said he angrily; "I ask you if the editor's in, and you ...ask me is he home, eh." "Why, presuming you understood ...Latin, we merely remarked, behold the man." "Latin !" returned ...he; "just say Latin, and I'm there every time." "Well, hurry ...up, we're busy, as you can see by looking at our agenda." "I ...don't know," replied the linguist, "anything about a gen...der, but I never saw a man in such a mood as you are—it's too ...imperative." "Oh, no," we replied, coming up smiling, ..."it's indicative that we are an amicus humani generis." ..."Well," said he, just as if he wished to impress it upon ...us that he understood every word we uttered, "you may ...be a cuss, but if you are a humane, generous one, accept ...my story, pay me the price, and let me go, for I once moved ...in good society, but I have been reduced." "What re...duced you?" said we, sarcastically, Bella, horrida, bella?" "Sir," ...said he, betraying an incandescent state of anger, "I've ne'er ...had ought to do with women." "You mistake us; we asked if vear, horrible vear, had reduced you; so you see our animus was ...good." "I did not come here for any muss, but to sell my ...story," he replied, in an indefinably belligerent attitude. ..."Friend," said we, extending our hand, "inter nos, don't it strike ...you that——" "You dare to strike me in the nose," he inter...posed, in a frantic frame of mind, "and I'll be——" Here the ...full strength of the CLIPPER corps piled in, and, seeing how mat...ters stood, the gentry "lited" our learned friend, after we had ...so beautifully "lowered" him. Thus do we take the starch out ...of self-opinionated scribblers. Ecce signum and entre nous.

THE ZANFRETTAS—Alex. and Josephine—appeared all last week at Butler's American Theatre in the trick, comic and fairy pantomime of "Medina," supported by George Edeson as Pantaloon, Harry D. Guion, and Amalie Zuccoli, as well as nearly all the variety company. All the scenery used was painted expressly for the pantomime, and it was very artistically done, the transformation scene of "The Coral Grotto" being very handsome. Fattie Stewart put in an appearance on the 5th in one of his eccentric acts called "Fat and Greasy," and contributed considerable amusement to the evening's entertainment. Frank Wood also commenced an engagement at this house in a song and dance, and was heartily received by the audience. Business was pretty good all through the week. Joe M. Mortimer, banjoist, and Denny Gallagher, a popular and versatile Ethiopian comedian, appear this week.

"BEAUTY AND THE BEAST" was brought out in good style on the 5th inst., at Banvard's Museum, with new scenery and costumes. Fanny Stocqueler looked, acted and sang charmingly as the Beauty; Ada Monk made a sparkling and fairy-like Sprite, and Miss Frank McClellan was acceptable as Flirtina. Mrs. M. L. Berrell as Virginia, H. B. Phillips as Sir Morton, and S. B. Duffield as the Beast, were respectively good. "A Day After the Wedding" preceded the burlesque, with John Albaugh as Col. Freelove, and Annie Phillips as Lady Freelove.

"CASTE," a new London play, by T. W. Robertson, the author of "Ours," "Society," etc., was produced at the Broadway Theatre on the 5th inst., by Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Florence. The piece has been in preparation at Wallack's Theatre for the opening night for some time, and it was stated that the management had purchased the exclusive right of playing the piece in this city. Consequently, when it was announced for production at the Broadway, Mr. Moss, acting for Mr. Wallack, commenced a suit against Barney Williams and W. J. Florence, to restrain them from playing it. An injunction was granted and served on Friday night, Aug. 2d. A hearing was had on the 5th inst., and permission obtained from the Court to give the performance, subject to further consideration. As a work it is clever, ingenious, and original, and one of the best comedies witnessed in this city for a long time. It has no great novelty of plot, but its construction, though natural and thoroughly effective, is very simple. Its success is attributable to the freshness and truth of its characters, the points of its situations, and the brilliancy of its dialogue. It is free from a weakness conspicuous in others of Mr. Robertson's pieces. A little dash of cynicism is present in the piece, but in no greater quantity than is necessary to impart a pleasant flavor to the whole. The piece was written during the trade movement in London, and though dealing with remarkable freedom with the most vexed political topics of the day, the author never appears a partisan. He has sketched with a free pencil a drunken, dissolute mob orator, who is perpetually bawling about the claims of labor and the tyranny of aristocratic oppressors. Yet so cleverly is this character managed that it would be preposterous for the most fastidious to take offence. This character is, moreover, contrasted with that of another working man, in which the traits of the respectable mechanic are hit off with great clear-sightedness, good nature and sense of humor. The story may be briefly told. The Hon. Geo. D'Alroy (W. J. Florence) is the son of an earl, whose widow has subsequently married a French nobleman, becoming thus a marchioness. George, who has the mental weakness of a lisp, falls in love with Esther Eccles, a ballet dancer, and the daughter of a drunken vagabond. Polly, a sister of Esther, is also in the ballet, and in love with Sam Gerridge, a gas fitter. The play opens at the residence of Esther and Polly. George makes a call, bringing with him Capt. Hawtree, a regular London swell, who disregards all feelings of caste, and tries to persuade him against marrying Esther on account of being so below him in station, but at the same time gets up a flirtation with Polly. At this juncture, Eccles comes in reeking with gin, which makes Hawtree more persistent in his endeavors to stop George from marrying into the family. The second act introduces George and Esther in their palatial home, after a secret marriage of six months. The marchioness is daily expected to arrive from Rome, and George lacks courage to tell his wife of the calamities that threaten their marriage felicity through the prejudice of his mother, who is unaware of his marriage. George has been ordered out with Hawtree on active service to crush the rebellion in India, and is too weak to tell his wife of his almost immediate departure. He sends for Polly to break the news to her, but no sooner has the servant gone than Polly appears. The marchioness is then announced, and Polly and Esther fly hurriedly into an adjoining room, where they overhear the conversation between mother and son and learn for the first time that George is going away. Esther faints and is brought before the marchioness, and upon reviving is introduced by George to the astonished marchioness as his wife. Horrified at her son's marriage, her feelings are raised to a pitch of extreme bitterness, when Eccles, drunk as usual, enters, accompanied by Gerridge in his working clothes. Eccles claims acquaintance with the marchioness, who recoils with horror from his touch. As the time has arrived for George to depart, he requests his wife to buckle on his sword. She attempts to do it, but the task is too much for her; her head falls back, and, with a low, shuddering cry, she falls fainting in his arms. George kisses her, departs, and the curtain falls. The third and last act brings us back to the old home of Eccles. Capt. Hawtree has returned from India with the news that George has been taken prisoner by the Sepoys, and supposed to be dead. Esther, who is now a mother, finds herself compelled by her necessities to accept an engagement in the theatre, as all the money left with her by her husband has been stolen and spent in riot by her father, and nearly all she possessed in household affairs sold. The marchioness visits Esther and desires to take her grandchild from Esther and bring it up among her own class. This raises the indignation of Esther, who orders her out of her house. Esther has been kindly treated by her friends, particularly Hawtree, who has at times advanced her money. Esther retires to rest and Hawtree enters. Supper is ready, and Polly puts the milk pitcher on the door step for the milkman, which is soon brought in by George, who, by his sudden appearance, frightens every one. Assuring herself that he is mortal, Polly hugs him with joy. An explanation follows, and Esther's troubles told him. George is then hid and Esther enters. His safe arrival home is gradually broken to her, and, turning round, she throws herself into his arms. The Marchioness arrives, forgets and forgives, kisses her daughter-in-law, and the curtain falls upon a piece which throughout its whole action kept the audience in a state of constantly changing emotion. Never for a moment was it tedious, and it abounds with admirable touches, concerning which the best thing we can say is, they are so good it is a pity to take them from the situation in which they are found. It was placed upon the stage in splendid style, the second act being one of the most natural, perfect and real box setts we ever saw, and so was the home of Eccles, in the first and third acts. Mrs. F. S. Chanfrau was excellent as Esther, in the sad, quiet intensity of its pathos. Portions of her impersonation were remarkable in their significance. Such were those respectively in the second and third acts. Her eager, unquiet, hopeful, yet scared look in the last scene, as though the fear of being mistaken overweighed the joy to which she scarcely dared to cling, was as fine as anything of the kind could be. The role of George was too much for Mr. Florence and entirely out of his line. He did not thoroughly understand the character, or doing so, failed to represent the kind, soft hearted, brave gentleman of the piece. Mr. Marlowe was very good indeed as Hawtree, as was Mrs. Gilbert as the Marchioness. Mr. F. Lamb managed his part and he played it admirably. He received a call in the third act for his capital acting. Mrs. Florence was only fair as Polly. The character is one of those that requires an actress full of vivacity to correctly interpret it, which Mrs. F. failed to do. The house was crowded every night last week, and "Caste" bids fair to enjoy a run.

"WHEN SHALL I SEE MY DARLING AGAIN?" is the title of a song just published by Stephen Massett. It has been sung in the leading concert halls of London with great success, we are told. It is issued from the well known publishing house of Messrs. Hall & Son, of this city.

STEPHEN MASSETT sailed for California on the 10th inst.

A. M. GRISWOLD, professionally known as the "Fat Contributor," called on us on the 7th inst.

SHARPLEY AND COTTON'S MINSTRELS commenced a season at the Fifth Avenue Opera House on the 5th inst. Although the hall was not crowded, yet the attendance was fair. There are eleven performers in the first piece, with Sharpley as tambo, Cotton as bones, M. T. Skiff as middleman, J. H. Cook, Ira Paine, J. E. Greene, M. T. Skiff and another "singist" in the quintet. The entertainment throughout was very well received by the audience, and nearly every act encored. Sam Sharpley is one of the wittiest as well as most original performers in the business. He is the life of the first part with his queer, quaint and original jokes. In his banjo solos in the olio he is also very funny, and can always keep his auditors roaring with laughter. He possesses a style peculiar with himself, and having had considerable experience in and out of the show world, has the happy faculty of grasping at once whatever may be suiting the country and working it up into a very good joke, and doing it in such a manner that no one can take offence. He is also one of those comedians who are very guarded in what they say, and while he makes fun at the expense of all, be they great or small, he goes just far enough not to offend or to say that which will cause a blush to mantle the cheek of any one. Ben Cotton enjoys in other cities a great reputation as a comedian, but we cannot endorse these opinions so far as the end business is concerned. What he does is done quietly and without causing any alarm among his auditors. He cannot lay claim to much originality, his gags being old acquaintances that we have heard many a time and oft. In the olio business Mr. Cotton is in his element, for it is there that he lets himself loose and does some very clever acts. Mr. Skiff is a good middle man. The singing in the first part was only fair, but the instrumental music was good. Master Bennie Cotton is a smart boy, and danced a step jig very cleverly. He was also good with Ben Cotton in the act of "That's My Son," made very popular years ago by Add Weaver and Master Barney. Sam Sharpley's banjo solo took hugely in the olio, receiving several encores. Mr. Bloodgood may be a good song and dance man, but we failed to discover it. Masters Willie and Charlie did a good song and dance, and J. E. Green's mocking bird song was a gem. Alfred Moe appeared in the skating carnival at the close of the first part. Business was pretty good during the week. This evening Mr. J. B. Murphy, tenor, appears.

"UNDER THE GASLIGHT," is the title of a new local drama, written by Augustin Daly, to be produced at the New York Theatre this evening. The piece, which is entirely a local one, has a scene at Delmonico's, a view of basement life in this city, Judge Dowling's Court in the Toombs, the city, piers, the Hudson by moonlight, life at Long Branch, and a railroad accident. Several new faces will be added to the company, including Rose Eytinge, John K. Mortimer, J. B. Studley, Blanche Grey, Chas. Parsloe Jr., "Dolly" Davenport and Rose Skerrett.

LOTTA continues the dramatic sensation of the city. She commences this evening the third week of her so far brilliant engagement at Wallack's. "The Pet of the Petticoats," and "Family Jars," the only pieces that this bewitching little actress has yet appeared in, are to be repeated the first two evenings of this week and on the 14th inst. "Little Nell" is to be produced. This is one of John Brougham's dramatizations from Dickens' novel of "Old Curiosity Shop."

ALEXANDER ROSS, better known as "Sandy," died in this city on the 7th inst., in the 48th year of his age. His funeral took place on the 9th inst., and his remains were interred in Calvary Cemetery. His disease was dropsy. He had been confined to his bed for about four weeks. For ten years he was officer at Bryant's Minstrel Hall, and at the time of his death was engaged with Kelly & Leon's minstrels.

MRS. F. W. LANDER, the accomplished tragedienne, is to commence an engagement at the French Theatre on Fourteenth street, in this city, on the 19th inst., as Elizabeth, Queen of England, supported by a talented company of her own selection. Further announcements in regard to the arrangements will be made before the first performance.

DELEHANTY AND HENGLER, clog dancers, of whom so much has been said of late by two different minstrel hall managers, commence their evening with Kelly and Leon's Minstrels. Fred Williams, tenor, late of Buckleys' Minstrels, puts in an appearance Business was very good every evening last week. Leon did a terpsichorean act called "Kitty from Cork," and his make-up and rendering of the song and dance were very laughable.

THAT GENIAL ACTOR, author and "speechist," John Brougham, continues his engagement at the Olympic Theatre. He appeared the past week as Wilkins Micawber, in "David Copperfield," and Powhatan, in "Pocahontas." The same bungling stage business, such as shifting of scenes, noticed in a late issue of the CLIPPER, appears to be chronic at this house. It is singular that a manager will permit stage carpenters, to go behind the scenes in such a condition, so that it is impossible for them to know one scene from another, and nearly ruin the interest of the piece, as was the case on the evening of the 12th inst. Four or five new scenes that had been painted expressly for the burlesque could not be run on at all, in consequence of the glorious state of the stage hands. Mr. Grover's lease expires at this establishment in three weeks, which may be the cause of the continued bad state of affairs behind the stage. Mr. E. Coleman, an English actor, made his debut in this city on the 12th inst., as Uriah Heap, and made a favorable impression. In "Pocahontas," Chas. Peters made quite a hit in the role of Rolff.

MD'LLES CERREBELLI AND INVENESIZZI, two danseuses, lately brought to this country from Europe for the "Black Crook", make their debut this evening at Niblo's.

SAM COLLYER, the plucky little light weight of the P. R., closed his engagement at Tony Pastor's Opera House on the 10th inst. He appeared the past week with his two pupils in a triple clog He appeared the past week with his two pupils in a triple clog dance in white face. Sam is a very clever clog dancer, and his pupils know how to shake a foot with any of their size, age or weight in the business. Sam also appeared in his Indian club exercise. On Friday evening he appeared in a set-to with the gloves with Dick Hollywood, in the Donnybrook Fair scene, during the unrolling of the panorama of "A Tour Around the World." It was a lively affair and quite a number of representatives of the roped arena were in the house. The lively Tovee was on hand and introduced Collyer and Hollywood to the audience. Jennie Engel is a great favorite at this house, and the Hibernian Boys are very clever performers. Tony Pastor holds his own, and Billy Sheppard is a favorite in his song and dance and banjo solos, but he cannot do "Nicodemus Johnson." This week Sarah E. Seaft, a young lady club swinger, and Billy Emmett, Ethiopian comedian, appear. A musical burlesque, entitled "Wm. Du Tell," written by John F. Poole, is to be produced this evening.

JOSEPH JEFFERSON commences the Fall season at the Olympic Theatre, under the new management, early in September, with his new burlesque of "Forty Thieves," brought by him from London, England, and the same piece that is to follow the "Black Crook" at Niblo's.

ONCE more the trouble commences at the San Francisco Minstrel Hall. During their six weeks vacation the hall has been repainted and decorated and an entire new set of scenery painted. The hall now presents a very clean appearance. Their third season will be inaugurated this evening with all the old favorites.

GRIFFIN AND CHRISTY'S MINSTRELS continue at their new hall, on Broadway and Twenty-third streets, delighting their patrons with gems in minstrelsy. Mr. E. Percival, the tenor, has become a great favorite, as has George Christy and Mr. Griffin. Business was fair during the past week.

THE "BLACK CROOK" IN COURT.—Mrs. Jones, professionally known as Rose Ryan, one of the original "Black Crookites," sued Messrs. Jarret and Palmer on the 9th inst., for salary due. She testified that she was engaged in Manchester, England, by Mr. Palmer, to appear in the "Black Crook," in this city, for $15 per week for six months, her passage money, and a renewal for four months if Messrs. J. & P. so elected. Mrs. Jones claimed, in the first instance, that though she had rendered the services, she had not received all her pay; part of the deduction, $24, was for fines inflicted for her absence from the theatre and neglect to come on the stage in time. On one occasion she was absent two nights in the week, and her entire pay from that week was forfeited. The occasion of her being late, the lady claimed, was because sufficient help was not provided by the defendants. She claimed that she had played an extra matinee every week, making a claim on her part of $50 for every matinee for 42 weeks. By an agreement, however, put in evidence, it appeared that she was engaged by the week, and not by the performance, though subsequently, as the lady claimed, Mr. Jarrett promised to pay her for matinees. On cross-examination witness said she had seen a printed circular with the words "Niblo's Garden," instructions for the "corps de ballet," but never read it. On the occasion of her staying away from the theatre she was confined to her house by sickness. Wm. F. Norton, an actor, testified that he was familiar with the customs of the theatres in this country and abroad, and that "a week's performance" meant six times. The Court, under the agreement, ruled out all claims for extra performances. The Court held that the plaintiff was hired for a week, that she was fined for absence in cases where it was shown that she had broken her contract, and the managers had a right to fine. That she had signed receipts in full, after she knew she had been fined, without protest. There was no proof of extra performance, and the motion for a non-suit was granted.

SO FAR the Eighth Avenue Opera House has become a fixed institution among the lovers of amusement on the west side of the town. Business continues very good, and by keeping up a succession of novelties the managers are reaping a nice little harvest. Sam Collyer and his two pupils appear this week, also the Gardner Sisters.

"NOBODY'S DAUGHTER" had to be withdrawn from the boards of the New York Theatre in the very height of its popularity, as it was attracting crowded houses every night, and we doubt if any other piece will do as well during the warm nights. Owing to previous arrangements another author had two weeks' time, commencing Aug. 12th, so "Nobody's Daughter" has been transferred to the boards of Banvard's Museum, where it will be given all this week, with Kate Reignold's in her original character.

THE APOLLO CLUB, composed of musicians, is to hold its annual festival at Union Park, on Second avenue and 65th street, on Friday, the 16th inst. For of whom to procure tickets, see advertisement.

SAM SHARPLEY AND CHARLEY WHITE have leased the theatre on Broadway, lately occupied by Mr. Lingard, and will open on the 26th inst. as a variety place of amusement. Ella La Rue has been secured—also a host of popular performers.

DEATH OF IRA ALDRIDGE.—The cable telegram informs us that this celebrated African tragedian died lately while on a tour in Poland. A portrait and biography of him will appear in our next issue.

Mr. C. W. TAYLEURE, a gentleman who has had considerable experience in theatrical management has been secured as business manager for the Olympic Theatre next season. A better selection could not be made, as Mr. Tayleure understands all the ins and outs of the show world.

THE WORRELL SISTERS have been stopping for a few weeks past at Pleasure Bay, near Long Branch, at which place they were serenaded on several occasions by Gilmore's Band, and, being lovers of music, the compliment was duly appreciated. A few days since they left the sea side, and are now rusticating about the hills of Lake Mahopac, prior to their return to the New York Theatre on the 2d of September, which they propose opening with a burlesque on a very popular drama.

THE JAPS IN COURT.—Ever since the first troupe of Japanese performers landed on our hospitable shores they have been pulled before our police courts. On Sunday, the 11th inst., Mr. Thomas Maguire appeared at headquarters, and stated to Inspector Leonard that one of his troupe, Foo-Kee-Mats, had stolen $3,500, and he asked for his arrest. The matter being fully explained, it appeared that Maguire was ready to pay and all, had told him that they had not received the money. Accordingly, Foo Kee-Mat's was arrested at the Revere House, taken to headquarters and kept after locked up in a cell. A hearing was had on Monday the 12th, before Justice Logan, on the charge of grand larceny. The testimony of Zoo-Kah-Chee, Zig-Chee-Chee, Cler-Rau-Kee, Kee-Saw-Raw, Two-Skee and I-Ae-Skee, was to the effect that they had appointed him treasurer of the party, and fully authorized him to receive money from Mr. Maguire on account of their services. It was with their wish that he retained the money for their benefit. One of the interpreters, who appeared on behalf of Mr. Maguire, said that the latter did not wish to make any complaint, and Foo-Chee-Mats was accordingly liberated.

OWING to the great quantity of rain that we have had in this vicinity of late, quite a rise has taken place in the rivers, which may, no doubt, in a measure account for the rush of talent to the Rivers of dramatic agency notoriety, whose headquarters is at 13 West Houston street. Rain or shine, Rivers & Co. run on the even tenor of their way, attending to the wants of the show folks.

Dramatic.

EDMUND COLE'S "BLACK FIEND COMPANY" performed at Farmington, Me., on the 1st, 2d and 3d inst., going thence to Livermore, South Paris and Lewiston. Among the latest sensations in the company was a dual marriage, which took place at Farmington, between Mr. J. B. Brown and Miss Adelaide Gonza'es, and Mr. J. C. Percy and Miss Mary Fitzsimmons. It was the occasion of much excitement among the good folk of Farmington, the little village church being well filled with joyous swains and rustic belles, besides a sprinkling of summer excursionists who annually resort to this pleasant little village, and the ceremony passed off in a most pleasing and agreeable manner.

SCOTT'S OCEAN YACHT TROUPE is the name of a dramatic company traveling by a handsome yacht, built and fitted out in Philadelphia, some months since, by Mr. Scott. Booth, Edwin Forrest, Julia Dean, Edwin Adams, Bistori, Kate Reignolds and others.

A list of first class stars are engaged, and will appear during the season. S. K. Chester is engaged for leading business; Mrs. Carroll, for leading ladies; Mrs. S. K. Chester, for walking ladies; Mr. Carroll, heavy; Sam Ryan, first low comedy; Mrs. Maeder, old woman; and H. B. Hitchcock, assistant treasurer.

THE LADIES AND GENTLEMEN engaged for the season of 1867-68 at the Opera House, Pittsburgh, Pa., are requested to assemble in the green room at noon, Wednesday, August 21st.

T. W. DAVEY & Co.'s "Black Crook" company, who have been traveling since May last, are still on their winding tour, pitching tent in all encouraging looking towns by the way. They are to be in Muscatine, Iowa, Aug. 14th and 15th, and thence proceed to Burlington, Keokuk, Quincy, Galesburg, Peoria, Bloomington and Springfield, Ill. They are said to be doing quite well.

PHILADELPHIA was bereft of dramatic and kindred amusements during the past week, the theatres and halls being shut as "tight as a brick." This week the spell is broken by the opening of the Walnut Street Theatre, and the production of the spectacle of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," which has long been in preparation, and which is to be presented in the highest style of scenic art. In a previous issue we gave a list of the company engaged to appear in this spectacle.

A MAMMOTH TROUPE OF THE BEST ARTISTS, according to announcement, is to be engaged for Fox's Variety Theatre, in Philadelphia. This establishment, it is thought, will be opened a week earlier than calculated upon, and the company engaged are requested to make note of a similar statement in advertisement in another column. The proprietor is at all times ready to negotiate with talent of every description.

A BIG BENEFIT was realized by James Pilgrim, stage manager of Fox's Combination Troupe, on their last night in Boston, which shows that the Bubites are good Christians, as they thus helped to make Pilgrim's progress through life easier.

The plays presented were "Temptation; or, The Irish Emigrant," "Grimshaw, Bagshaw and Bradshaw," and the "Spectre Bridegroom." At the end of the performance Mr. Carroll was called for and requested, by the principal of the college and the audience in general, to recite the poem of "Shamus O'Brien," which he had recited once before at the college.

THE ADDRESS OF MORRIS SIMMONDS, late agent for the Hanlon Brothers, will be found in another column.

M'LLE ZAVISTOWSKI AND TROUPE attracted large audiences to Corinthian Hall, Rochester, N. Y., last week. The Express of that city says:—"THE ZAVISTOWSKI TROUPE—LAST NIGHT OF THE ENGAGEMENT.—This evening is the last one of the engagement of the Zavistowski troupe in this city. It is the best company of its kind that ever appeared in Rochester, and it well deserves the patronage of the public. M'lle Emmeline and La Petite Alice are remarkable in their respective lines of business. The former is fully the equal of the favorite Lotta in some comic parts, and her comic dancing and singing are better, because more artistic, than anything of the kind we ever saw Miss Lotta attempt. In compliance with the request of several persons in the audience she kindly repeated the song and dance of "Rowdy Neil" last night, and was deservedly encored. To-night the Irish drama entitled "Kate Kearney" will be presented, when the brilliant and charming M'lle Christine Zavistowski will appear."

FROM CHICAGO, ILL., we have the following news from our correspondent "Joe," under date of August 9th. He says:—"At Wood's Museum we have the 'Overland Route,' a comedy by Tom Taylor. The piece is a good one and is drawing splendid houses. The central figure of the play is an adventurer named Tom Dexter, (F. E. Aiken,) who seems to be the pivot on which everything turns. Mr. Aiken makes all of the part that any one could, although it is, dramatically, the weakest part in the piece. Mr. Dillon is funny, as usual, in the part of Augustus Lovibond. Mr. Lemoyne, as Sir Solomon, is excellent. Mr. Barry's Colepepper is another of this gentleman's precise delineations. Mr. Murphy speaks the lines of Captain Smart very plainly. The Major McTurk of Mr. Sawtelle is very good. Mr. Wood gives us rather an extravagant rendition of Capt. Clavering. The rest of the male characters are done in a passable manner. Of the ladies, each and every one are doing remarkably well. Mrs. Sebright, M

THE MASSACHUSETTS BILLIARD CHAMPIONSHIP.—William A. Tobin, the present champion billiard player of Massachusetts, has been challenged by E. Daniels, an ex-champion, to play a game for the golden cue and the usual accompanying stake of $250 a side. Mr. Tobin has accepted the challenge, and the game will be played sometime during the first week in November next. It will be the eighth contest for the championship. The emblem of superiority, the golden cue, was won by Mr. Tobin in the billiard tournament, which took place at Boston in March, 1865. He was soon challenged and beaten by R. E. Willmarth, by 61 points in a game of 1,500. Mr. Willmarth was immediately challenged by E. Daniels, who took the prize at the tournament. The game was played October 18th, 1865, resulting in favor of Mr. Daniels by 480 points. The winner was challenged by Mr. L. W. Langdon, of Florence, a competitor in the tournament. This game, being the third, was played February 21st, 1866; Mr. Daniels won by 247 points. Mr. Willmarth again challenged Mr. Daniels; the game was played June 20th, 1865, and resulted in favor of Mr. Daniels by 589 points. The fifth game was between Mr. Tobin and Mr. Daniels. It was played October 17th, 1866, and resulted in the defeat of the latter by 208 points. The winner was challenged by the loser, and the result was the sixth regular contest, which took place February 21st, 1867. Mr. Daniels was again defeated, Mr. Tobin winning by 60 points. The next aspirant was Mr. John H. Flack, of Boston, who contested Mr. Tobin's claims on the 28th of June, 1867, and was beaten by 30 points. It will be seen that of the seven games, Tobin has won three and lost one, and that Daniels has won three and lost two. Tobin's grand average has been a small fraction better than 10, and Daniels has been just about 10. Thus they seem to be an equal match, and it would be very difficult to name the winner of the eighth game for the golden cue.

A. W. JAMIESON, the champion billiard player of the Pacific Coast, who holds the golden cue, has been challenged by Ed. Morris to play a 1,500 points, carom game, crotch barred, on a three-quarter sized table, for $500 a side and the cue. Jamieson has accepted and put up $250, forfeit money.

QUOITING.

THE PROPOSED INTERNATIONAL QUOITING MATCH.

Although Wm. Hodgson has made no direct response to the challenge from R. Walkinshaw, of Scotland, under the impression, as some have been trying to make him believe, that the defi was not from the Cariops Tailor, but came indirectly by way of relation of his in this city, the Scotch wielder of the disc is still eager for the fray, as will be seen by the following extracts from a letter sent to Mr. John Buckbee, of the Normal Club, of this city, by Walkinshaw's backer, H. Currie, of 92 Union street, Glasgow, from whom we have received several letters on the same subject. Amongst other things Walkinshaw says that he will have to give up his business, which he could not think of doing unless allowed £50 for expenses in coming to New York to play, which he is willing to do, as he offers the same amount for the match to take place in Scotland. He very properly states that he cannot leave Scotland until there is a deposit of £50 a side and also his expenses in the hands of a stakeholder. He is ready to leave the country on three months' notice, and would like to be in New York at least three weeks before the match. That there may be no misunderstanding, Walkinshaw says: "If I win the match I will expect, as hitherto, to be allowed £50 of the stakes, or five shillings on the pound. You may depend upon my coming forward and doing my best; but I must be insured by a deposit of money that there will be a match ere I leave Scotland."

The following are the terms under which Walkinshaw will play, sent on for Hodgson's or any other man's consideration:—

Robert Walkinshaw, of Scotland, N. B., and——, hereby agree to play a game of quoits for £200 sterling a side, 122 shots up, 61 shots to be played on——, and the game finished on——. The party first scoring 122 shots gain the stakes. Distance 21 yards, stiff sticking clay ends, pins level with the clay, and all the clay cleared away at measurement, and the nearest to the centre or to the top of the pin to count. Quoits not to exceed 9 inches in diameter. The pins to be 2 feet long, of iron, 1 inch in diameter, and tapered to a half inch at top. The ground to be staked and roped, and not less than 27 yards by 12 yards. only three men for each player and the referee to be admitted within the ropes. The parties agree to meet in the house of ——, New York, on——(day before the match), to choose a referee, and failing their agreeing, the referee shall be named by the editor of the ——. The game to be played on —— ground, on Saturday, ——, and on——, commencing each day at —— (fix an hour to allow six hours' daylight). The editor of the —— to be stakeholder, with whom £50 sterling aside is now deposited (five other deposits). —— agrees to play Walkinshaw, £50 sterling, for expenses, which sum shall be deposited with the stakeholder on ——, and paid to Walkinshaw on his making the final deposit. The gate money, after deducting advertising expenses, to be equally divided between the players. The party failing to fulfil this agreement to forfeit the money.

SWEEPING CHALLENGE FROM A VETERAN "QUOITIST."—Geo. Dunning, familiarly known as Uncle George, authorizes us to say that he will play any man in the country a match at quoits, with 9 or 9½ inch quoits, weighing from 5 to 5½ lbs, 18 yards rise, soft clay ends, mots to be 1½ inch above the surface, for from $100 to $300 a side, in two weeks from making the match. Or he will play any man with 6¼ inch quoits, weighing 4 lbs, on the same condition and for the same amount. A match can be made any time by calling on or addressing the Veteran at the Normal Grounds in this city.

DOUBLE HANDED MATCH.—Messrs. McLaren and Whitmore and Smith and McGregor had a spirited match on McLaren's grounds, Newark, N. J., on the 9th inst., lasting two hours and fifteen minutes, and resulting in a victory for McLaren and Whitmore by one point only. Half a century was the prize contended for.

THE DISC AT MORRISTOWN.—Jas. Gregory and R. Lockwood had a lively game of quoits at Morristown, N.
